

KEEP THIS AS A REFERENCE!!

IB Lab Report Format

Before you begin writing, do the following things:

- (1) Get the notes that you took in this class
- (2) Get notes you took as you planned and performed the experiment
- (3) Read through this and decide what you think needs to be included in each section of the report—make notes if you want to do so.

General Comments:

- All final reports must be typed (and turned in electronically!).
- Raw data and observations must be recorded as neatly as possible in blue/black ink when you are doing lab work. These should be kept in your IB bio folder. If you record a number in error, mark through it with 1 line (no erasing or whiteout!).
- Include chemical reactions in the report, where applicable.
- Do not write in 1st person singular (don't use 'I', 'we', 'he', etc...Example of an appropriate statement: The acid was added to the beaker.)
- In your reports, be sure to give references as needed!! This is VERY important!

Elements of the formal report:

Whenever you are writing a formal lab report, this format is your default format. Sometimes there will be additional expectations for an individual assignment. This report is to be written in sections as indicated below using the style indicated.

TITLE (descriptive)

BACKGROUND OR INTRODUCTION

- Explains observations, information given in class, and research information that led you to your question. You may include reasons for raising the question. If you changed the question during the course of the experiment, because of what happened or failed to happen, discuss that in this section. Write this section in paragraph form.

QUESTION

- Write your question in its final form. This must be a QUESTION, not a statement.

HYPOTHESIS

- Present your hypothesis as an "If _____, then _____." statement relating one independent and one dependent variable.

MATERIALS

- List all materials (not in sentence format)

PROCEDURES

- Specifically describe the factors that are to be controlled. Describe what you will watch, measure and use as your criterion. Describe independent and dependent variables. This may be paragraph form.
- Describe the steps that you took as a set of numbered statements. Explain adjustments that you made and the conditions that prompted these adjustments.
