Translation affects the understanding of content and themes. A translated work enables people to understand untranslatable ideas and concepts in language that is familiar to them. It is important to know that in the translation of a work, sometimes the meaning is lost or cannot be as effectively communicated as in the original work. The students will understand the nature and value of translated works.

E Durkheim

Ibo Guide English A1 2015:

Miten luemme? Aino Mäkilä, Elias Heikkonen, Kaisa Ilmonen, Päivi Koponen, 2024-12-16 This collection of articles examines literature education in Finnish upper secondary schools. The authors of the articles are literary scholars who present current perspectives on the study of literature. The central argument is that literary education in upper secondary schools has been overly focused on textual analytical close reading while experiential and reflective methods of dealing with literature may motivate young readers in new ways. The book consists of three sections. The first section delves into the current state of upper secondary school literature education by examining curricula and comparing upper secondary school literature teaching to the diploma programme offered by the International Baccalaureate. The second section then examines how materiality, intersectionality and gender conscious reading can be incorporated into literary education. The third section highlights experiential approaches to literature. The articles discuss the starting points of experiential learning bodily and reflexive close reading, the experience of reading ecological dystopian literature and the potential of audiobooks in school education in light of what listening means to literary education.

The Urban Tree Duncan Goodwin, 2017-04-07 There is a growing evidence base that documents the social, environmental and economic benefits that urban trees can deliver. Trees are however under threat today as never before due to competition for space imposed by development, other hard infrastructures, increased pressure on the availability of financial provision from local authorities and a highly cautious approach to risk management in a modern litigious society. It is therefore incumbent upon all of us in construction and urban design disciplines to pursue a set of goals that not only preserve existing trees where we can but also ensure that new plantings are appropriately specified and detailed to enable their successful establishment and growth to productive maturity. Aimed at developers, urban planners, urban designers, landscape architects and arboriculturists, this book takes a candid look at the benefits that trees provide alongside the threats that are eliminating them from our towns and cities. It takes a simple applied approach that explores a combination of science and practical experience to help ensure a pragmatic and reasoned approach to decision making in terms of tree selection, specification, placement and establishment. In this way, trees can successfully be incorporated within our urban landscapes so that we can continue to reap the benefits they provide.
