An Interview

This interview was conducted (where, when and what time - you should provide this information yourself).

- Q: Hello, thank you for agreeing to give us this interview. Let me ask you the first question right away. How did you enter your career field?

During that period, I had severe conflicts with my parents, and my relationship collapsed. Coping with the overwhelming experience in one period was the most difficult. However, the belief that it would only make me stronger helped me move on.
- Q: Yes, indeed, personal difficulties can prevent you from climbing the career ladder. How important do you think networking is in your profession?
 1. A: Networking is one of the most critical components of the success of private practice. One of the best, in my opinion, definitions of networking sounds like this: it is building relationships with people aimed at realizing
