

When the switch is closed, the circuit is complete and current flows from the positive terminal of the battery, through the switch, and then through the light bulb, causing it to glow.

The diagram illustrates the basic components of an electrical circuit: a power source (battery), a control device (switch), and a load (light bulb). The switch acts as a gate that can either allow or prevent the flow of electric current.

In this case, because the switch is open, the circuit is incomplete, and no current flows. This is why the light bulb is not glowing.

By closing the switch, the path for the current is completed, and the light bulb will begin to glow, demonstrating the relationship between a closed circuit and the flow of electricity.

With the switch closed, the circuit is complete, and current flows from the positive terminal of the battery, through the closed switch, and then through the light bulb, causing it to glow.

This diagram shows the same components as the first one, but the state of the switch has changed. Closing the switch completes the circuit and allows the light bulb to operate.

The difference between the two diagrams is the position of the switch, which controls whether the circuit is open or closed and whether the light bulb is on or off.
