Computational Nanotoxicology Agnieszka Gajewicz,Tomasz Puzyn,2019-11-13 The development of computational methods that support human health and environmental risk assessment of engineered nanomaterials has attracted great interest because the application of these methods enables us to fill existing experimental data gaps. However, considering the high degree of complexity and multifunctionality of engineered nanoparticles, computational methods originally developed for regular i.e. classic chemicals cannot always be applied explicitly in nanotoxicology. Thus the main idea of this book is to discuss the current state of the art and future needs in the development of computational modeling techniques for nanotoxicology. The book focuses on methodology. Among various in silico techniques, special attention is given to i) computational chemistry, quantum mechanics, semi-empirical methods, density functional theory, molecular mechanics, molecular dynamics; ii) nanochemoinformatic methods, quantitative structure-activity relationship modeling, grouping, read across; and iii) nanobioinformatic methods, genomics, transcriptomics, proteomics, metabolomics. Alternatives to Laboratory Animals, 2008. Impacts of Point Polluters on Terrestrial Biota, Mikhail Kozlov, Elena Zvereva, Vitali Zverev, 2009-07-28. The adverse consequences of pollution impact on terrestrial ecosystems have been under careful investigation since the beginning of the twentieth century. Several thousand case studies have documented the biotic effects occurring in contaminated areas. However, after more than a century of research, ecologists are still far from understanding the effects of pollution on biota. Only a few generalisations have been made on the basis of extensive monitoring programs and numerous experiments with industrial contaminants. The need to reveal general patterns in the responses of terrestrial biota to industrial pollution and to identify the sources of variation in these responses became obvious more than a decade ago. At about that time, our team initiated a quantitative research synthesis of the biotic effects caused by industrial pollution based on 1) a meta-analysis of published data. All meta-analyses conducted so far covering diversity and abundance of soil microfungi, diversity of vascular plants, diversity and abundance of terrestrial arthropods and plant growth and reproduction consistently showed high heterogeneity in the responses of terrestrial biota to industrial pollution. At the same time, they demonstrated an unexpected shortage of information suitable for meta-analyses as well as a considerable influence of methodology of primary studies on the outcome of the research syntheses. To overcome the identified problems, we designed a comparative study, the results of which are reported in this book.
