

SITUATIONAL LEADERSHIP

DEFINITION

Situational leadership is a leadership style that involves adjusting one's leadership approach based on the specific situation and the development level of the team members being led. It posits that there is no singular best leadership style; instead, effective leaders fluidly transition between behaviors depending on the context.

EXAMPLE

With an inexperienced team, a leader might step-up and take much more active involvement in the day-to-day tasks, offering greater oversight and management. Then, with a highly experienced team, the same leader steps back, offering autonomy and only providing support or direction when specifically requested by the team.
