Consulting the Genius of the Place Wes Jackson, 2011-09-01 Locavore leaders such as Alice Waters, Michael Pollan and Barbara Kingsolver all speak of the need for sweeping changes in how we get our food. A longtime leader of this movement is Wes Jackson, who for decades has taken it upon himself to speak for the land to speak for the soil itself. Here he offers a manifesto toward a conceptual revolution. Jackson asks us to look to natural ecosystems or, if one prefers, nature in general as the measure against which we judge all of our agricultural practices. Jackson believes the time is right to do away with annual monoculture grains, which are vulnerable to national security threats and are partly responsible for the explosion in our healthcare costs. Soil erosion and the poisons polluting our water and air, all associated with agriculture from its beginnings, foretell a population with its natural fertility greatly destroyed. In this eloquent and timely volume, Jackson argues we must look to nature itself to lead us out of the mess we've made. The natural ecosystems will tell us if we listen what should happen to the future of food.

Organizing the Green World: A Conceptual History of Botanical Classification Tod F. Stuessy, 2025-09-02 This book focuses on plant systematics and evolution with special interest on the history and philosophy of botanical classification. Tracing the history of how humans have dealt with ordering the plant world is very much a glimpse of how human culture and science have progressed over the past 2000 years. The objective in this book is to present ideas on plant classification beginning with classical Greek and Roman scholars through the Middle Ages into the Renaissance and finally to the modern 21st century. Significant quantitative methods in classification have originated within the past 70 years which have never before been integrated with previous historical perspectives. Most textbooks of systematic botany contain an historical introduction or perhaps a chapter on the history of classification but this book presents much greater detail on the classifications themselves and the cultural dimensions of the different time periods. Biographical detail is also provided to give a better appreciation of the individual botanists who have contributed new ideas in the search for maximally predictive systems.
