Pitts, Dwight Garrison Moore, 1961 A summary is presented of a research program aimed at the improvement of high temperature strain gages of the electrical resistance type Potential ceramic and metal components were evaluated and a gage was devised that was based on these evaluations This gage NBS 5B was flexible and easy to install however it lacked resistance stability at higher temperatures In an attempt to minimize this deficiency ceramic cements were developed that showed greater electrical resistivity than had been previously observed in the range 800 to 1800 degrees Fahrenheit also a technique was devised for increasing the resistance to ground by applying a fired on ceramic coating to the grid of a specifically developed unbacked gage A study was made of the cause of the erratic response of cemented gages that had not been preheated prior to use There were strong indications that the erratic response was caused mostly by the rapid decrease in resistance that accompanied structural changes in the cement NBS Monograph, 1963 Papers Relating to the Foreign Relations of the United States United States. natural disasters to long term international policies to promote peace and development This book also raises searching questions about how resilience thinking influences the types of knowledge and understanding we value and challenges traditional conceptions of social and political processes It sets forward a new and clear conceptualisation of resilience of use to students academics and policy makers emphasising the links between the rise of resilience and awareness of the complex nature of problems and policy making Parliamentary Papers Great Britain.
