How Agreements Work Agreements are a central element of international law. They are typically written documents that outline the terms of cooperation between two or more states. Agreements can cover a wide range of issues, including trade, security, environment, and human rights. They are often negotiated through diplomatic channels and can be binding or non-binding. The effectiveness of an agreement depends on the willingness of the parties to comply with its terms. Agreements can be modified or terminated if the parties agree to do so. They are a key tool for promoting international cooperation and stability.
