Few people are aware that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has approved a new drug for the treatment of chronic hepatitis C. The drug, called peginterferon, is a combination of interferon and a polyethylene glycol (PEG) molecule. It is marketed by Schering-Plough under the name Pegasicon. The drug is given by intramuscular injection once a week for 48 weeks. The FDA approved the drug in December 1996, based on data from a phase III clinical trial. The trial showed that the drug was more effective than interferon alone in treating chronic hepatitis C. The drug is also safer than interferon alone, with fewer side effects. The drug is currently available in the United States and is being marketed in other countries. The drug is expected to be a major advance in the treatment of chronic hepatitis C.
