There is a growing body of evidence that the use of a computerized decision support system (CDSS) can improve the quality of patient care. The CDSS can provide the clinician with the most current and relevant information, and can help to reduce the risk of error. The CDSS can also help to improve the efficiency of the clinical process, and can help to reduce the cost of care. The CDSS can be used in a variety of ways, and can be tailored to the needs of the individual clinician and the specific clinical setting. The CDSS can be used to help with the diagnosis of a patient, to help with the selection of a treatment, or to help with the monitoring of a patient's progress.
