Preventing Violence Against Women and Children Institute of Medicine, Board on Global Health, Forum on Global Violence Prevention, 2011-09-12 Violence against women and children is a serious public health concern with costs at multiple levels of society Although violence is a threat to everyone women and children are particularly susceptible to victimization because they often have fewer rights or lack appropriate means of protection In some societies certain types of violence are deemed socially or legally acceptable thereby contributing further to the risk to women and children In the past decade research has documented the growing magnitude of such violence but gaps in the data still remain Victims of violence of any type fear stigmatization or societal condemnation and thus often hesitate to report crimes The issue is compounded by the fact that for women and children the perpetrators are often people they know and because some countries lack laws or regulations protecting victims Some of the data that have been collected suggest that rates of violence against women range from 15 to 71 percent in some countries and that rates of violence against children top 80 percent These data demonstrate that violence poses a high burden on global health and that violence against women and children is common and universal Preventing Violence Against Women and Children focuses on these elements of the cycle as they relate to interrupting this transmission of violence Intervention strategies include preventing violence before it starts as well as preventing recurrence preventing adverse effects such as trauma or the consequences of trauma and preventing the spread of violence to the next generation or social level Successful strategies consider the context of the violence such as family school community national or regional settings in order to determine the best programs

Towards more effective collaboration by higher education institutions for greater regional development in the Gauteng City-Region Robert Bergman, 2014-11-19 Higher education institutions HEIs in the Gauteng City Region GCR and elsewhere are increasingly being called upon to do more than their traditional roles of teaching and research They are now expected to collaborate and engage with other stakeholders with a view to contributing directly and indirectly to social and economic development in their localities Such an orientation includes having HEIs actively fostering public private partnerships and other initiatives that enhance equitable regional development The adoption of such a focus has implications for all aspects of these institutions activities as well as for the policy and regulatory framework in which they operate This Occasional Paper reflects critically on the role of HEIs in regional development It surveys current debates on the matter and draws out some of the implications on how we ought to think further about the current state of government industryacademia interaction and collaboration for development in the GCR It is motivated by an awareness of the increasing importance of higher education in the regional development discourse alongside a body of international theory and practice on the contribution of HEIs to regional development A cornerstone of this body of literature is the so called triple helix framework within which government industry and academia work intimately intensely and collaboratively towards a common vision of regional development Within this framework HEIs are considered to be a public good that must play a large meaningful and relevant role in the development and improvement of the cities and regions where they are located 1 2 They do not and cannot stand completely outside the realities of their geographic social cultural and political environment The intended audience for this report extends beyond academics and HEI administrators to include government officials business and labour leaders civil society and citizens because a discussion on stimulating and improving the GCR must be much more than an academic exercise The collaboration that is essential to regional development requires stakeholders to be familiar with a wide spectrum of issues of importance to individual constituencies Each constituency must add value and insight to the discussion by drawing on their specific knowledge experience and self interests Establishing this common ground is fundamental to initiating meaningful debate about what the GCR can and should be and how regional HEIs can work more collaboratively creatively and effectively to improve and advance the region

Country Reports on Human Rights Practices ,2011 Crime, Deviance, and Social Control in the 21st Century Claudio Colaguori,2023-03-06 Crime Deviance and Social Control in the 21st Century seeks to go beyond traditional criminology texts and handle the subject through a perspective focusing on power interest and social justice Timely and accessibly written the text provides a comprehensive overview of social and criminological theory as well as recent trends in theorizing power and deviance It also delves into the significant implications the committal and control of crime have for human rights This text aims to answer the questions Who has the power to decide which acts are deviant Whose interests are being served by a given law and Which social groups are being disadvantaged when society has been constructed along such legally demarcated lines The contributors dissect the criminalization of dissent the changing nature of what constitutes deviance internet hate self harming transgender identities the growing rise of transnational criminal enterprises internet fraud and the increased public attention on police practices With a Canadian focus placed in a global context the text challenges readers to consider crime and deviance as socially structured phenomena while recognizing that crime is a worldwide issue Crime Deviance and Social Control in the 21st Century is a critical resource for undergraduate students in criminology police services and sociology FEATURES Offers an accessible and comprehensive introductory overview of criminology theory Employs a social justice approach to the fundamentals of criminology deviance law and social control Includes bolded key
