Timothy J. Tranbarger, Mark L. Tucker, Jeremy A. Roberts, Shimon Meir, 2017-11-22 Plant organ abscission is a developmental process regulated by the environment stress pathogens and the physiological status of the plant In particular seed and fruit abscission play an important role in seed dispersion and plant reproductive success and are common domestication traits with important agronomic consequences for many crop species Indeed in natural populations shedding of the seed or fruit at the correct time is essential for reproductive success while for crop species the premature or lack of abscission may be either beneficial or detrimental to crop productivity The use of model plants in particular Arabidopsis and tomato have led to major advances in our understanding of the molecular and cellular mechanisms underlying organ abscission and now many workers pursue the translation of these advances to crop species Organ abscission involves specialized cell layers called the abscission zone AZ where abscission signals are perceived and cell separation takes place for the organ to be shed A general model for plant organ abscission includes 1 the differentiation of the AZ 2 the acquisition of AZ cells to become competent to respond to various abscission signals 3 response to signals and the activation of the molecular and cellular processes that lead to cell separation in the AZ and 4 the post abscission events related to protection of exposed cells after the organ has been shed While this simple four phase framework is helpful to describe the abscission process the exact mechanisms of each stage the differences between organ types and amongst diverse species and in response to different abscission inducing signals are far from elucidated For an organ to be shed AZ cells must transduce a multitude of both endogenous and exogenous signals that lead to transcriptional and cellular and ultimately cell wall modifications necessary for adjacent cells to separate How these key processes have been adapted during evolution to allow for organ abscission to take place in different locations and under different conditions is unknown The aim of the current proposal is to present and be able to compare recent results on our understanding of organ abscission from model and crop species and to provide a basis to understand both the evolution of abscission in plants and the translation of advances with model plants for applications in crop species Genetic and Molecular Analysis of Quantitative and Qualitative Late Blight Resistance in Tetraploid Potato

Deb,2008-02-02 Since the discovery of p53 as a tumor suppressor numerous methods have evolved to reveal the unique structural features and biochemical functions of this protein Several unique properties of p53 posed a challenge to understanding its normal function in the initial phase of its research The low levels of p53 in normal cells its stabilization under situations of genotoxic stress induction of growth arrest and apoptosis with stabilization of the protein obstructed the visibility of its normal unmutated function The property of p53 that can sense a promoter and transactivate or inhibit is still not well understood It is still not known whether it is the absence of the protein that causes tumorigenesis or if its mutants have a dominant role in inducing cancer p53 Protocols comprises eighteen chapters for the study of the diverse properties of p53 and related proteins The methods included are invaluable for delineating the function of other proteins that may function as tumor suppressors or growth suppressors The chapters are not presented in any schematic order for the importance and diversity of the functions of p53 make it impossible to organize them suitably We have made a sincere effort to collect the methods most useful to those investigators working on tumor suppressors or growth suppressors The purpose of p53 Protocols is not only to provide investigators with methods to analyze similar biochemical functions but also to familiarize them with the associated problems that arose during the course of investigations Source Water Assessment Mark W.
