Africa's Lost Leader James Hamill, 2019-08-08 When Nelson Mandela was sworn in as president on 10 May 1994 South

Africa enjoyed an unprecedented global standing. Much of the international community, particularly Western states, saw the new South Africa as well equipped to play a dynamic and dominant role on the continent, promoting conflict resolution, economic development, and acting as a standard bearer for democracy and human rights. Yet throughout the presidencies of Nelson Mandela, Thabo Mbeki, and Jacob Zuma, South Africa has failed to deliver on this early promise. Its continental primacy has been circumscribed by its own reluctance to lead, combined with widespread African hostility to its economic expansion, antipathy towards its democratic ideals, and scepticism about its suitability as Africa's global representative. With an onerous domestic agenda as it continues to tackle the profound socio-economic legacies of apartheid, and with its military power also on the wane, South Africa must now adapt to an emerging multipolarity on the continent. This transition, which may produce a new concert of African powers working in constructive collaboration or lead to fragmentation, discord, and gridlock, is likely to determine Africa's prospects for decades to come. This Adelphi book squarely challenges the received wisdom that South Africa is a dominant power in Africa. It explores the country's complex and difficult relationship with the rest of the continent in the post-apartheid era and examines the ways in which the country has struggled to translate its economic, military, and diplomatic weight into tangible foreign policy successes and enduring influence on the ground. The conclusions of this book will be valuable to academics, policymakers, journalists, and business leaders seeking to understand the evolution and trajectory of South African policy in Africa.
