

Picking a short cover from a music magazine of your choice, write 300 words or less to identify the audience it targets through a the connotations of each element.

I have decided to use my essay on the dance magazine, "Mixmag." I have chosen this magazine as the front cover is awarded and interprets many connotations. Identifying the target audience for this particular magazine was simple as I think that it is aimed mainly at my demographic due to the different elements used throughout the magazine cover. I will elaborate on this point further on through my essay.

The first thing that caught my eye on the magazine cover was the masthead. The font is rounded and stylish, for example, the letter "Y" is slightly different from the other letters to make it stand out. The colour of the masthead is fluorescent orange, I think that this particular colour is effective as it's not only an eye-catching colour but it targets the magazine's audience perfectly. For example, the magazine is aimed at a specific niche group who enjoy dance music and clubbing, therefore the colour of the masthead represents the lifestyle of this niche group, fluorescent colours and neon lights are.

The colour of the masthead is used throughout the magazine cover, it is used on numerous coverlines including the main coverline. I think the colour orange represents the house style of the magazine because it's used, it's different and it's bold. The left hand of the magazine effectively caught my eye for many reasons, the colour orange but mainly because there was a free CD available with the purchase of this magazine. The primary optical area also states, "FREE ULTIMATE HAN HOUZEL IS A FREE CD" just to make sure you know there the cover of the free CD is aimed at the target group using fluorescent yellow for the CD title. Also, underneath the CD, it says, "is your mix missing? Mix up your mixtape!" the words "mix up" are effective as these words are often related to dance music, also, the selling line is successful as it simply states what the magazine is all about, "The world's biggest dance music and clubbing magazine." The use of words such as "The world's biggest..." help to sell the magazine as it gives the impression that the magazine is certain it is the best dance magazine around, this would certainly persuade me to purchase it.

The main coverline and main image is about "Mista Mac" who is a well respected dance DJ. The coverline follows the same style with the fluorescent orange colour, however the font is different from the masthead. This is to make the masthead unique as it can be recognised easily. Above the masthead it states, "You've Got To Get It?" This text helps target the correct audience because only the target group would understand what this particular statement means. For example, "Tangzi" stands for "Pete Tong" who is also a well respected dance DJ. Beneath the main coverline it says, "is the ready for the biggest job in dance music?" When the reader picks up the magazine, they will see the statement and it will persuade them to read the article.

The main image of "Mista Mac" is effective for many reasons. All aspects of the image are modern and contemporary. The image works successfully with the magazine as the particular demographic. This magazine is aimed at youth males so the image. For example, "Mista Mac" is wearing a series of nothing that his shoulder pads in, this is very fashionable at the moment in time. It seems that she is also holding on to a white pole that is lit up, this creates a sense of clubbing which helps target the correct audience.

The coverline on the magazine are down the left and right side of the magazine. The ones on the left seem to be the more important articles, so they have been put on the left hand of the magazine to catch the reader's eye. One of the more effective coverlines in my opinion is the one that says, "International Madness - who put the 'rave' in travel?" I like this coverline as it was lots of components to target a particular audience, for example alliteration is used to attract the reader, also the use of a holiday location would interest my demographic, plus the use of the word "rave" which relates back to the genre of the magazine.

On the top right hand of the magazine, it says, "What Can we hear clubbing plans until every month." This tells the reader that by buying this magazine they will be able to go out all the time, thanks to this magazine.

In conclusion, I think that this magazine targets its audience perfectly and professionally. It uses many components to persuade the reader to purchase the magazine. I found it easy to write about this magazine as it is aimed at my demographic and I am part of the niche group that the magazine is targeted at.
