The four-eyes principle contained in clause 4.2 f of ISO Guide 65 is kept in ISO/IEC 17065 by clarifying that the review and decision has to be performed by person(s) different from those who carried out the evaluation whereas review and decision can be done by the same person(s)

As in ISO/IEC Guide 65 the certification decision shall be made by person(s) employed by or under contract with the certification body meaning that subcontracting or otherwise delegating the certification decision is not allowed. The possibility to use person(s) for the decision who are under the organizational control (clause 7.6.4) of the certification body is new. Organizational control is for example whole or majority ownership regarding the legal entity that employs or contracts the person(s) who make the certification decision
