Team Sports Training Javier Mallo, 2020-03-10 Team Sports Training The Complexity Model presents a novel approach to team sports training examining football soccer rugby field hockey basketball handball and futsal through the paradigm of complexity Under a traditional prism these sports have been analyzed using a deterministic perspective where the constituent dimensions of the sportsmen were independently examined and treated in isolation It was expected that the body worked as a perfect machine and once all the components were maximized the sportsmen improved their performance If the same closed recipe was applied to all the players that formed part of the squad the global team performance was expected to be enhanced As much as these reductionistic models seem coherent when contrasted in practice we see that the reality of team sports is far more different from the closed conditions in which they were idealized Team sports contain variable heterogeneous and non linear constraints which require the development of a different logic to organize their training During the last years ecological psychology the dynamical systems theory or the constraints led approach have opened interesting fields of research from which many conceptual foundations can be applied to team sports Based in this contemporary framework the current book presents the study of the players and the teams as complex systems using coordination dynamics to explain the emergence of the self organisation episodes that characterize them In addition this thinking line provides the reader with the ability to apply all these innovative concepts to their practical training scenarios Altogether it is intended to challenge the reader to re think their training strategy and to develop an original theory and practice of training specific to team sports      Modularity in Motor Control: From Muscle Synergies to Cognitive Action Representation Andrea d'Avella, Martin Giese, Yuri P Ivanenko, Thomas Schack, Tamar

Flash, 2016-04-21 Mastering a rich repertoire of motor behaviors as humans and other animals do is a surprising and still poorly understood outcome of evolution development and learning Many degrees of freedom non linear dynamics and sensory delays provide formidable challenges for controlling even simple actions Modularity as a functional element both structural and computational of a control architecture might be the key organizational principle that the central nervous system employs for achieving versatility and adaptability in motor control Recent investigations of muscle synergies motor primitives compositionality basic action concepts and related work in machine learning have contributed to advance at different levels our understanding of the modular architecture underlying rich motor behaviors However the existence and nature of the modules in the control architecture is far from settled For instance regularity and low dimensionality in the motor output are often taken as an indication of modularity but could they simply be a byproduct of optimization and task constraints Moreover what are the relationships between modules at different levels such as muscle synergies kinematic invariants and basic action concepts One important reason for the new interest in understanding modularity in motor control from different viewpoints is the impressive development in cognitive robotics In comparison to animals and humans the motor skills of today's best robots are limited and inflexible However robot technology is maturing to the point at which it can start approximating a reasonable spectrum of isolated perceptual cognitive and motor capabilities These advances allow researchers to explore how these motor sensory and cognitive functions might be integrated into meaningful architectures and to test their functional limits Such systems provide a new test bed to explore different concepts of modularity and to address the interaction between motor and cognitive processes experimentally Thus the goal of this Research Topic is to review compare and debate theoretical and experimental investigations of the modular organization of the motor control system at different levels By bringing together researchers seeking to understand the building blocks for coordinating many muscles for planning endpoint and joint trajectories and for representing motor and behavioral actions in memory we aim at promoting new interactions between often disconnected research areas and approaches and at providing a broad perspective on the idea of modularity in motor control We welcome original research methodological theoretical review and perspective contributions from behavioral system and computational motor neuroscience research cognitive psychology and cognitive robotics      Psychology in Sports Coaching Adam R.
