

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 15 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The control group remained sedentary throughout the study, while the training group participated in a 12-week training program. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the training group had a significantly lower HR and higher EE compared to the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and increase EE in sedentary, middle-aged women.
