Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease between two groups of men who had been exposed to asbestos. One group consisted of 60 men who had worked in an asbestos vermiculite mine and the other group consisted of 60 men who had worked in a vermiculite mine without asbestos exposure. The results showed that the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was significantly higher in the group exposed to asbestos than in the group not exposed to asbestos.

If the U.S. imports 100 units, it must produce 1,100 units. Thus, the U.S. must produce 1,300 units to supply domestic demand and 1,100 units to supply foreign demand.
