energy intensive cooling technologies are widely used as a means of preservation Technologies of cryopreservation support global food chains seed and blood banks reproductive medicine and even the preservation of cores of glacial ice used to study climate change In many cases these practices of freezing life are an attempt to cheat death Cryopreservation has contributed to the transformation of markets regimes of governance and ethics and the very relationship between life and death In Cryopolitics experts from anthropology history of science environmental humanities and indigenous studies make clear the political and cultural consequences of extending life and deferring death by technoscientific means The contributors examine how and why low temperatures have been harnessed to defer individual death through freezing whole human bodies to defer nonhuman species death by freezing tissue from endangered animals to defer racial death by preserving biospecimens from indigenous people and to defer large scale human death through pandemic preparedness The cryopolitical lens emphasizing the roles of temperature and time provokes new and important questions about living and dying in the twenty first century Contributors Warwick Anderson Michael Bravo Jonny Bunning Matthew Chrulew Soraya de Chadarevian Alexander Friedrich Klaus Hoeyer Fr d ric Keck Eben Kirksey Emma Kowal Joanna Radin Deborah Bird Rose Kim TallBear Charis Thompson David Turnbull Thom van Dooren Rebecca J H Woods Government-wide Index to Federal Research & Development Reports ,1967 Thermal Design of Aeroassisted Orbital Transfer Vehicles H. Bernard Garrett,George Louis Smith,John Noble Perkins,1972 An implicit finite difference scheme is developed for the fully coupled solution of the viscous radiating stagnation streamline equations including strong blowing Solutions are presented for both air injection and injection of carbon phenolic ablation products into air at conditions near the peak radiative heating point in an earth entry trajectory from interplanetary return missions A detailed radiative transport code that accounts for the important radiative exchange processes for gaseous mixtures in local thermodynamic and chemical equilibrium is utilized in the study With minimum number of assumptions for the initially unknown parameters and profile distributions convergent solutions to the full stagnation line equations are rapidly obtained by a method of successive approximations Damping of selected profiles is required to aid convergence of the solutions for massive blowing It is shown that certain finite difference approximations to the governing differential equations stabilize and improve the solutions Detailed comparisons are made with the numerical results of previous investigations Results of the present study indicate lower radiative heat fluxes at the wall for carbon phenolic ablation than previously predicted
