- Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The participants were randomly assigned to either a control group or an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and strength training. The control group did not exercise. The physical fitness and health-related quality of life were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher physical fitness and health-related quality of life at the end of the 12-week training program compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary middle-aged women.
