HATCHET

PROBLEM-BASED LEARNING

You Are Brian

You are Brian Robeson, stranded alone in the Canadian wilderness. In addition to your hatchet, you brought one additional item ashore after the plane crashed: a small one-way radio. Because of the low battery, you are only able to send short one-way messages of twenty words or less. Your mission is clear: send only words that will help searchers find you. You must send one message after every two chapters.

Can your students locate Brian using information from the book?

materials included in this book were selected by panels of teachers and scientists using evaluation criteria developed for the guide. The criteria reflect and incorporate goals and principles of the National Science Education Standards. The annotations designate the specific content standards on which these curriculum pieces focus. In addition to the curriculum chapters, the guide contains six chapters of diverse resources that are directly relevant to middle school science. Among these is a chapter on educational software and multimedia programs, chapters on books about science and teaching, directories and guides to science trade books and periodicals for teachers and students. Another section features institutional resources. One chapter lists about 600 science centers, museums, and zoos where teachers can take middle school students for interactive science experiences. Another chapter describes nearly 140 professional associations and U.S. government agencies that offer resources and assistance. Authoritative, extensive, and thoroughly indexed, and the only guide of its kind, Resources for Teaching Middle School Science will be the most used book on the shelf for science teachers, school administrators, teacher trainers, science curriculum specialists, advocates of hands-on science teaching, and concerned parents.
