Title: War Neurosis and the Great War

Historical Question: Why did the Great War fuel the study of psychological trauma and illness? [\[Read below how to develop a good historical question.\]](#) (This part is optional now, but have a thesis question by your first draft.)

Prior to the Great War, the desire to study war neurosis was nearly nonexistent. However, World War I brought the demand to understand soldiers' reactions to the destruction they witnessed. Why did the Great War fuel the study of psychological trauma and neurosis? To answer this question, one must understand the development of war trauma research. Doctors had primitive views of trauma. Most educated psychoanalysts attributed trauma to women. They felt that women were genetically prone to cases of hysteria. If men had shown signs of psychological illnesses, doctors assumed the men were feminine or weak. Therefore, society put a stigma on anyone deemed psychologically unfit. Since men were naturally tough, doctors also assumed that men should not show signs of weakness during or after a war. Yet, most doctors began to move away from this assumption after studying soldiers from the Russo-Japanese war. The Great War made military officials, politicians, and doctors realize that the brutality of war caused men to psychologically deteriorate. Soldiers had always to think about their survival, so this made them prone to constant stress and anxiety. In addition, soldiers faced new weaponry like tanks, poisonous gases, and more powerful and accurate artillery. Finally, the interest in war neurosis peaked when soldiers returned to society. Doctors were stunned by the emotionless men they analyzed. Only after many years, soldiers began to open up and relate their experiences of the war. Therefore, the study of war trauma evolved during the Great War because of the curiosity of doctors, the attempt to understand the new form of violence the war brought, and the fascination with the soldiers after their return to society.

The study of war neurosis is important because the knowledge is useful in understanding the experience soldiers went through on the battlefield. Upon returning home, soldiers had feelings of guilt, remorse, fear, hysteria, and hopelessness. World War I marked the transition of society moving away from glorifying war to a feeling of uncertainty and apprehension. Although general accounts from World War I outlined the hardships of war, observance of psychological conditions educated societies about the dangers of violence. Also, the literature at this time gave individuals the opportunity to read about the horrors the young men endured. Even today, studying literature or personal accounts from armed conflicts comes from the Great War. The most well known accounts of psychological suffering among soldiers are the accounts of Vietnam. The early work of doctors on the Great War helped the study of traumatic stress in Vietnam. Knowledge about war neurosis was limited prior to World War I, but perhaps society will understand future soldiers because of the pioneer work done during the Great War. Finally, war neurosis helps psychologists understand human emotions. By examining an individual during

History in Transit Dominick LaCapra, 2018-08-06 History in Transit comprises Dominick LaCapra s explorations of relationships he believes have been insufficiently theorized between experience and identity between history and various theories of subjectivity between extreme events and their representation between institutional structures and the kinds of knowledge produced within them Taken together these discussions form a dialogical encounter

positing the links among epistemological questions historicist ones and issues pertaining to disciplinary and institutional politics Reacting against the antitheoretical bias of some prominent historians LaCapra presents an alternative model of historiographical practice one in which emphases on plurality and hybridity are combined with the concept of historical experience For LaCapra experience emerges as a category both theoretically determined and anchored in the facticity of the everyday LaCapra tests the assumptions and implications of the way one approaches the past by looking to psychoanalysis to render more self aware the relationship between the historian and his or her material He offers criticisms of assumptions held by practicing historians and theorists placing the study of history at the center of a larger argument about the role of the contemporary university Contesting both corporatization and claims that the university is in ruins LaCapra writes It is paradoxical that the demand to make the university conform to an ever increasing extent to a market or business model seems oblivious to the fact that the American university has probably been the most successful of its type in the world that students from other countries disproportionately desire to study in it History of the Independent Bar of South Australia John Emerson, 2006 South Australia's bar developed like no other bar in Australia better termed independent than separate its independent spirit showing in the distinctive preference for small sets of chambers Back cover
