

The Digestive System

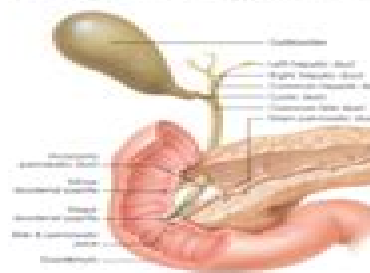

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food is broken down mechanically in the mouth, is digested through a series of chemical reactions, and is absorbed into the bloodstream. The digestive system also stores food for digestion and eliminates waste from the body. The digestive system is a complex system that is responsible for the health and well-being of the body.

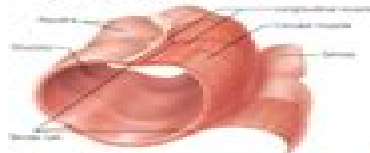

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the duodenum opens into the descending large intestine. The liver and pancreas are located in the upper right abdomen. The liver is the largest organ in the body, and the pancreas is a small, elongated organ located behind the stomach.

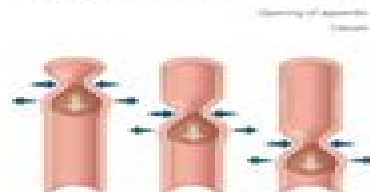

Layers of large intestine

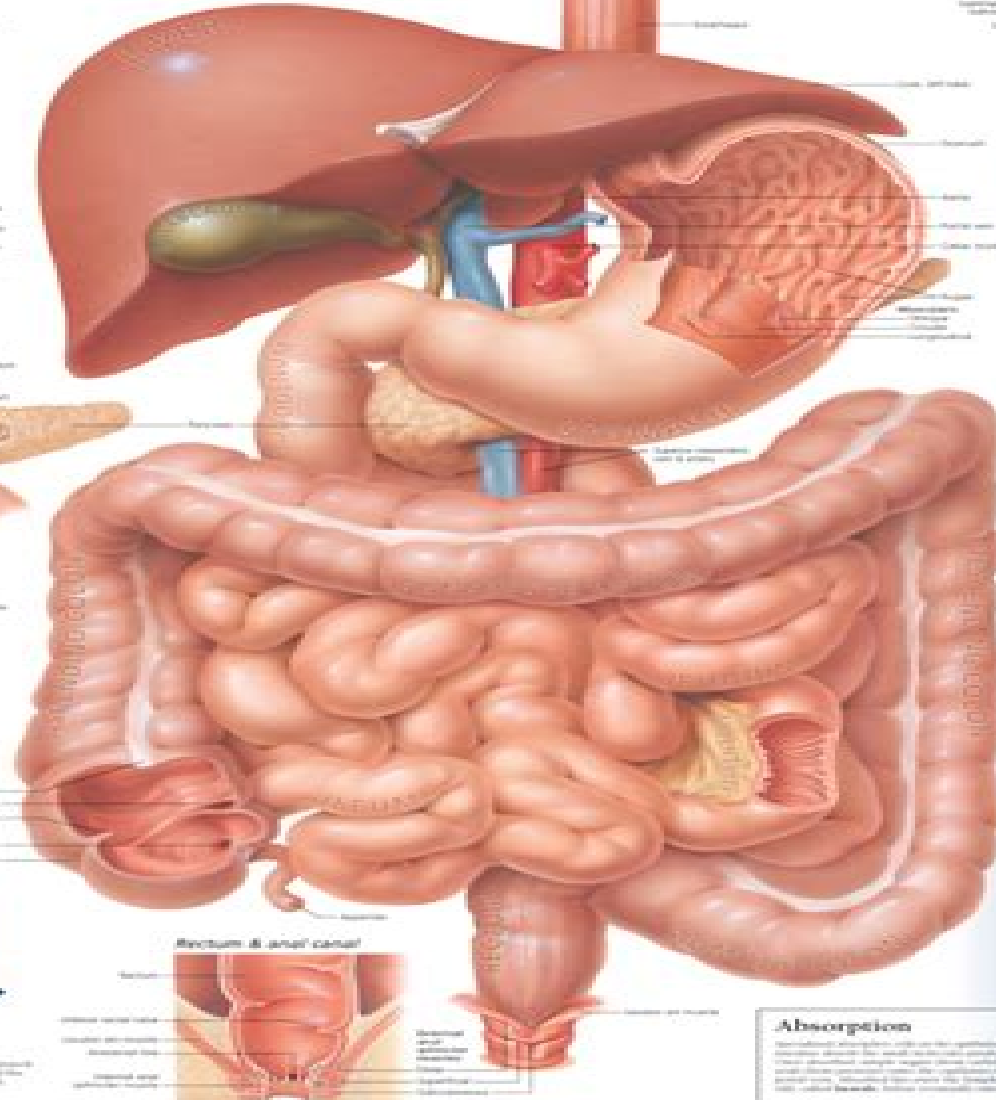

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food and for forming and expelling feces. The large intestine is a large, sac-like organ that is located in the lower right abdomen.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is broken down and absorbed.

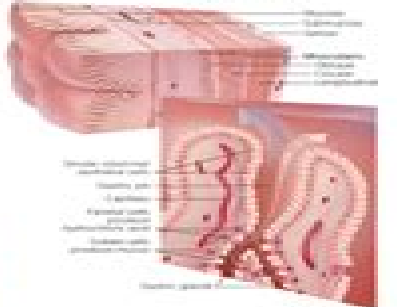

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of carbohydrates. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and are responsible for the production and secretion of saliva.

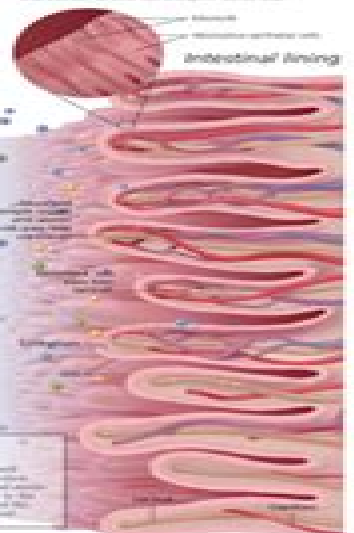

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left abdomen and is connected to the esophagus and the small intestine. The stomach has a thick, muscular wall that is capable of contracting and relaxing to mix food with gastric juices.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the lower right abdomen and is connected to the stomach and the large intestine. The small intestine has a highly folded wall that increases its surface area for the absorption of nutrients.

Absorption

The nutrients from the food are absorbed into the bloodstream through the walls of the small intestine. The nutrients are then transported to the cells of the body, where they are used for energy and growth.
