Learning By Doing The Pla Trains At Home And Abroad:

Learning by Doing Army War College (U.S.). Strategic Studies Institute, 2012 Examines how the PLA learns by doing specifically through its exercises and noncombat operations at home and overseas and through key logistical and theoretical developments Learning by Doing Strategic Studies Institute, 2012-11 Learning by Doing Roy Roy Kamphausen, David David Lai, Travis Travis Tanner, 2015-05-25 To better understand the PLA's ability to employ its developing capabilities in a variety of potential scenarios this year's workshop examined how the PLA learns by doing specifically through its exercises and noncombat operations at home and overseas and through key logistical and theoretical developments Key findings are 1 recent PLAN exercises and operations point to an increasing interest in developing expeditionary naval capabilities and a presence in distant seas suggesting that a move beyond the current near seas focus is both possible and an extension of existing efforts 2 PLA ground force exercises rather than aiming to intimidate others by demonstrating the ability to project power beyond China's borders focus on moving military power within China both to defend China's borders and perhaps as a prelude to military restructuring in which smaller but more mobile formations could replace larger and more static ones 3 through its participation in international military exercises as well as peacekeeping operations and humanitarian aid and disaster relief missions the PLA is gaining greater capabilities to deploy outside of China's borders for a variety of missions and 4 PLA operations are increasingly supported by a modern civilian integrated military logistics network though a lack of overseas bases continues to limit the effectiveness of this network as it pertains to overseas power projection capabilities Learning by Doing: the PLA Trains at Home and Abroad - Report on the People's Liberation Army, Chinese Military, China's Navy, Armed Police Force, Exercises and Training, and Logistics Lessons U. S. Army, Strategic Studies Institute (SSI), Director of National Intelligence, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), U. S. Government, 2017-09-20 The papers presented here are a timely and critical look at an evolving and expanding Chinese military and provide context for the changes we may yet see as the PLA continues to modernize As the USPACOM Commander I seek to better understand China in aspects that further our ability to find common areas of interest reduce miscalculation and contribute to regional stability Greater insight into the PLA is essential to this effort As the Chinese military matures grows and ventures farther from China's territory the regional and global implications for the United States and USPACOM as well as our allies and partners will be complex yet critical to our understanding of China's evolving international role and influence Therefore accurate and timely assessments of the changes taking place within the PLA are essential to understanding how the Chinese are matching military power with their broader policy aims The outstanding scholarship in this jointly sponsored study by SSI NBR and USPACOM is an important contribution toward this end The judgments in this volume provide unique and valuable insights on how the PLA is adapting its training to its perception of the security environment This does not just include how it is resourcing organizing and training its forces but also how the PLA thinks about warfare and the threats they currently face Through participation in international military exercises as well as peacekeeping operations PKO and humanitarian assistance and disaster relief HADR missions abroad the PLA is gaining greater experience in carrying out a broader spectrum of missions For example the lessons learned from counter piracy missions in the Gulf of Aden as well as internal transregional deployment exercises are impacting the way China responds to issues ranging from domestic natural disasters to cooperative security efforts requiring the projection and sustainment of military power beyond China s borders Monitoring these developments is not only key to our understanding of China s perceptions of the security environment but also to identifying opportunities to further develop cooperative capacity in the areas of nontraditional security threats a growing area of cooperation between our two militaries

Active Defense M. Taylor Fravel,2020-12-08 Since the 1949 Communist Revolution China has devised nine different military strategies which the People s Liberation Army PLA calls strategic guidelines What accounts for these numerous changes Active Defense offers the first systematic look at China s military strategy from the mid twentieth century to today Exploring the range and intensity of threats that China has faced M Taylor Fravel illuminates the nation s past and present military goals and how China sought to achieve them and offers a rich set of cases for deepening the study of change in military organizations Drawing from diverse Chinese language sources including memoirs of leading generals military histories and document collections that have become available only in the last two decades Fravel shows why transformations in military strategy were pursued at certain times and not others He focuses on the military strategies adopted in 1956 1980 and 1993 when the PLA was attempting to wage war in a new kind of way to show that China has pursued major change in its strategic guidelines when there has been a significant shift in the conduct of warfare in the international system and when China's Communist Party has been united Delving into the security threats China has faced over the last seven decades Active Defense offers a detailed investigation into how and why states alter their defense policies

China's Maritime Ambitions and the PLA Navy Sandeep Dewan, 2013-01-16 China's Maritime Power dates back thousands of years China has one of the oldest naval traditions in the world dating from at least the end of the Warring States period in 221 BC Nonetheless China has historically been a continental state with a large ground force and only a coastal navy with limited blue water capability The rise of modern day China raises considerable regional and security concerns besides economic and political competition towards finding a rightful place in power politics of the South Asian Region and hence needs a critical analysis There is a need to focus future strategies to deal with such challenges both in the medium and long term An effort to achieve the same has been undertaken in this book The book is sure to stimulate further discussions on China's navy and its ambitions Foreword by Srikanth Kondapalli

Protecting China's Interests Overseas Andrea Ghiselli, 2021-02-04 Protecting China's Interests Overseas provides a fascinating and new window into Chinese foreign and security policymaking In particular it shows how the management of non traditional security issues abroad led to the emergence of China's strategy to defend its interests overseas This book comes at a critical time as China has just inaugurated its first overseas military base in Djibouti thereby establishing a long term military presence outside Asia Based on a large number of Chinese primary sources the book examines how the main actors involved in the making and implementation of Chinese foreign policy understood the problem of protecting the assets and lives of Chinese companies and nationals abroad especially in North Africa and the Middle East and interacted with each other depending on their priorities preferences and organizational interests As the different chapters explore various aspects and dynamics within the Chinese foreign and security policy machine the analysis concludes that the emergence of China's strategy to defend its interests overseas was to a large extent crisis driven The evacuation of 36 000 Chinese nationals from Libya in 2011 was a critical moment in this process Henceforth significant efforts were made to strengthen the capabilities of and coordination between the different agencies under the control of the Chinese leadership especially the Chinese People's Liberation Army Consistently China's military presence abroad expanded and evolved over the years to stabilize the regions where the country's human and economic presence is most significant and to neutralize the non traditional security threats against it However Chinese policymakers still face important challenges and complex dilemmas on the path to formulate a sustainable policy towards this very difficult issue Protecting China's Interests Overseas also offers an opportunity to rethink how we study and understand Chinese foreign policymaking
