Martin Luther King, Jr. "I Have a Dream"

- It was more than 40 years ago, August 28, 1963, when a crowd of more than 250,000 people gathered in Washington, D.C., for the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom. It was a historic day in American history. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. gave the famous "I Have a Dream" speech. In his speech, Dr. King called for an end to racism and for equality for all people. He said, "I have a dream that one day this nation will live up to the promises of its Declaration of Independence. I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character. I have a dream that one day, down the road of life, the states of Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Texas will join the other states in a great brotherhood of love."
- Dr. King's speech was a powerful call to action. It inspired millions of people to join the civil rights movement. It also helped to bring about the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. This act made it illegal to discriminate against people on the basis of race, color, religion, or national origin. It also gave the federal government the power to enforce desegregation in schools and public places.
- Dr. King's speech was a landmark moment in American history. It showed the world that African Americans were not just fighting for their own rights, but for the rights of all people. It was a vision of a better future, a future where everyone is treated with dignity and respect. Dr. King's dream is still a goal that we should strive to achieve.
