

HYPOTHESIS

A hypothesis is a tentative statement or explanation that proposes a possible relationship between variables and is subject to testing and verification.

OVERVIEW

A hypothesis is a testable prediction that seeks to explain a phenomenon or make a statement about the relationship between variables. It is formulated based on prior knowledge, observations, or theories. Hypotheses serve as a starting point for scientific investigation, and their validity is assessed through empirical evidence.

EXAMPLES

Null Hypothesis: The null hypothesis is a statement that suggests no significant relationship or effect between variables.

Alternative Hypothesis: The alternative hypothesis is a statement that proposes a specific relationship or effect between variables, challenging the null hypothesis.

How Civic Action Works Paul Lichterman, 2020-12-15 The ways that social advocates organize to fight unaffordable housing and homelessness in Los Angeles illuminated by a new conceptual framework for studying collective action How Civic Action Works renews the tradition of inquiry into collective social problem solving Paul Lichterman follows grassroots activists nonprofit organization staff and community service volunteers in three coalitions and twelve organizations in Los Angeles as they campaign for affordable housing develop new housing or address homelessness Lichterman shows that to understand how social advocates build their campaigns craft claims and choose goals we need to move beyond well established thinking about what is strategic Lichterman presents a pragmatist inspired sociological framework that illuminates core tasks of social problem solving both contentious and noncontentious by grassroots and professional advocates alike He reveals that advocates distinct styles of collective action produce different understandings of what is strategic and generate different dilemmas for advocates because each style accommodates varying social and institutional pressures We see too how patterns of interaction create a cultural filter that welcomes some claims about housing problems while subordinating or delegitimizing others These cultural patterns help solve conceptual and practical puzzles such as why coalitions fragment when members agree on many things and what makes advocacy campaigns separate housing from homelessness or affordability from environmental sustainability Lichterman concludes by turning this action centered framework toward improving dialogue between social advocates and researchers Using extensive ethnography enriched by archival evidence How Civic Action Works explains how advocates meet the relational and rhetorical challenges of collective action

Technologies in Biomedical and Life Sciences Education Harry J. Witchel, Michael W. Lee, 2022-06-24 This contributed volume focuses on understanding the educational strengths and weaknesses of mediated content including media as a learning supplement in comparison to traditional face to face learning Each chapter includes research on and a broad brush summary of approaches to combining life sciences education with educational technologies The chapters are organized into four main sections each of which focuses on a key question regarding the consequences of incorporating media into education In this regard the authors highlight how educational technology is both a bridge and barrier to student access and inclusivity Further they address the ongoing discussion as to whether students need to be present for lectures and on how having agency in their own learning can improve both retention and conceptual understanding To link the content to current events the authors also shed light on the impact that the COVID 19 pandemic is having on the continuity of educational programs and on the growing importance of educational technologies Consequently the book offers life science educators valuable guidance on the technologies already available and an outlook on what is yet to come

Buchaev, Salikhbek G. Abdulmanapov, Arsen S. Abdulkadyrov, Arutyun A. Khachaturyan, 2020-08-18 This edited book presents scientific and practical recommendations for the successful state and corporate management of regional development under the conditions of the digital economy These conditions have produced a number of changes On the one hand new aspects of regional economies which require management are emerging above all digital technologies that have to be understood by the population employees in the labor market and regional companies On the other hand new opportunities for improving practices in the state and corporate management of regional development on the basis of digital technologies are also emerging e government systems digital marketing online trade smart regions etc This book provides an overview of the leading digital technologies and demonstrates how they can be used to improve modern practices in the state and corporate management of regional development in the digital economy The authors develop the conceptual foundations and put forward practical recommendations In closing the authors conclusions and recommendations are applied to the example of modern Russia ensuring the practical relevance of the research The Future of the Professions Richard Susskind, Daniel Susskind, 2022-03-31 This book predicts the decline of today's professions and introduces the people and systems that will replace them In an internet enhanced society according to Richard Susskind and Daniel Susskind we will neither need nor want doctors teachers accountants architects the clergy consultants lawyers and many others to work as they did in the 20th century The Future of the Professions explains how increasingly capable technologies from telepresence to artificial intelligence will place the practical expertise of the finest specialists at the fingertips of everyone often at no or low cost and without face to face interaction The authors challenge the grand bargain the arrangement that grants various monopolies to today's professionals They argue that our current professions are antiquated opaque and no longer affordable and that the expertise of their best is enjoyed only by a few In their place they propose five new models for producing and distributing expertise in society The book raises profound policy issues not least about employment they envisage a new generation of open collared workers and about control over online expertise they warn of new gatekeepers in an era when machines become more capable than human beings at most tasks With a new preface exploring recent critical developments this updated edition builds on the authors groundbreaking research into more than a dozen professions Illustrated with numerous examples from each this is the first book to assess and question the relevance of the professions in the 21st century

Long-term drivers of food and nutrition security Laborde Debucquet, David, Majeed, Fahd, Tokgoz, Simla, Torero, Máximo, 2016-05-18 The 2015 Global Hunger Index suggests that despite progress in reducing hunger worldwide hunger levels in 52 of 117 countries in the 2015 Global Hunger Index remain serious or alarming Since achieving and maintaining food and nutrition security FNS remains a goal for all countries it is important to understand the individual national and global factors that affect FNS This paper proposes an analytical framework to identify and analyze the respective roles of key long term drivers of FNS We start by identifying what the key variables affecting FNS are at the household and country level and then we continue by defining what the main exogenous or endogenous drivers affecting these variables are We discuss the key drivers of both aggregated food supply and demand and therefore their impact on prices Specifically for aggregated food demand we discuss demographic factors income growth changes in dietary preferences aggregated domestic distortions and overall quality of the food system With respect to the drivers of aggregated food supply we discuss land available for food products and the drivers behind land availability the share of waste losses generated by the food system and the normalized average yield We define yield as the amount of nutrients produced by unit of land It depends both on the physical yield of the crop or the livestock and on the quality of the food produced It also can be affected by the changes in production patterns linked to the different dietary patterns of the consumers and by climate change We emphasize the fact that in many cases key drivers may have ambiguous effects on the FNS situation of different agents For instance more liberal trade policies will affect real income terms of trade demand and supply returns of factors foreign direct investments and food prices and thus may lead to the improvement of the global level FNS that is the FNS of the majority of the population At the same time more liberal trade policies may bring food insecurity to some households Therefore careful quantitative assessment is needed for each policy option Finally we propose a typology of variables that will help modelers adapt their models to study the different
