United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Public Works. Subcommittee on Economic Development, 1971 Citizen, Mother, Worker Emilie Stoltzfus, 2004-07-21 During World War II American women entered the workforce in unprecedented numbers and many of them relied on federally funded child care programs At the end of the war working mothers vigorously protested the termination of child care subsidies In Citizen Mother Worker Emilie Stoltzfus traces grassroots activism and national and local policy debates concerning public funding of children's day care in the two decades after the end of World War II Using events in Cleveland Ohio Washington D C and the state of California Stoltzfus identifies a prevailing belief among postwar policymakers that women could best serve the nation as homemakers Although federal funding was briefly extended after the end of the war grassroots campaigns for subsidized day care in Cleveland and Washington met with only limited success In California however mothers asserted their importance to the state's economy as productive citizens and won a permanent state funded child care program In addition by the 1960s federal child care funding gained new life as an alternative to cash aid for poor single mothers These debates about the public's stake in what many viewed as a private matter help illuminate America's changing social political and fiscal priorities as well as the meaning of female citizenship in the postwar period
