The Changing Space Economy of City-Regions

Koech Cheruiyot, 2017-10-30 This book addresses the South African Space Economy and its stark disparities and dualisms through an assessment of the Gauteng City Region the largest economic agglomeration in the country and on a continent bedevilled by a myriad of development challenges The book s focus on understanding the overall character of Gauteng City Region s Space Economy through data mining analysis and mapping comprehensively supplements the Space Economy literature on the region It covers the disparities exacerbated by an overlay of apartheid planning ideology and top down regional development based on selective encouragement of manufacturing investments in growth points or poles and how implementation of past policies intended to cure these disparities have yielded mixed results This book further offers the Gauteng City Region as a microcosm of the national economy in the form of evident significant placed based variations in the intensity and character of economic structure that on the one hand enjoys massive agglomeration economies while on the other has high levels of poverty and large numbers of people living below the Minimum Living Level This book should appeal to urban studies specialists economists and development studies researchers in the Global South South African national bibliography ,1999 Classified list with author and title index Space Operations Craig Cruzen,Michael Schmidhuber,Young H. very little study has focused on the gendered spatial experiences of women and more particularly mothers in South African cities. Mothers sustain a number of multifaceted roles through and beyond the care of and provision for their children. They engage in multiple spheres of work, home, education, community and politics. Straddling these various realms, mothers are increasingly active users of a diversity of city spaces. In some cases, the daily routines of mothers are confined within a single neighbourhood, but most often, mothers enact their many roles on a day-to-day basis in many different areas of the city. The nature of motherhood as both a relationship of care and a role constructed in society and highly unequal urban conditions often impose heavy burdens, financial, temporal and emotional. However, the choices mothers make in the city by traversing diverse spaces in order to fulfil their multiple roles and the responsibilities and costs this inflicts is not well understood. This Occasional Paper speaks to this gap by exploring the spatial dynamics of mothers in Johannesburg. It investigates how women who self-identify as mothers navigate their own and their families' daily lives in the city in facing a variety of challenges and obstacles. Methodologically, the research involved studying the everyday practices and experiences of 25 mothers in the city who agreed to in-depth interviews and mapping exercises. The participants were a diverse group in terms of geographic location, income, race, age and family situation. The women narrated their daily lives and the routes they took through various places and spaces that made up their everyday experiences of the city. They discussed their decision-making around the choice of home, work, school, shopping and recreation and detailed the social and spatial dynamics of their support networks. Exploring these moral geographies of motherhood provides valuable insights into a group of people who engage the city extensively in ways that are under-recognised. In turn, understanding the spatial negotiations that typify mothers' lives exposes the depth of spatial inequality and poor urban management of our city region in new ways. This Occasional Paper is the result of a partnership between the South African Research Chair in Spatial Analysis and City Planning (SARCCP) and the GCRO and specifically involved a collaboration between researchers Yasmeen Dinath, Margot Rubin and Alexandra Parker. The insights presented here reflect results from a first phase of research that will be deepened through a larger study in 2018.

Urban Geomorphology Mary J Thornbush, Casey D. Allen, 2018-07-17. Urban Geomorphology: Landforms and Processes in Cities addresses the human impacts on landscapes through occupation, urbanization and development as a contribution to anthropogenic geomorphology or anthropogeomorphology. This includes a focus on land clearance, conservation issues, pollution, decay and erosion, urban climate and anthropogenic climate change. These topics, as well as others, are considered to shed more light on the human transformation of natural landscapes and the environmental impacts and geomorphological hazards that environmental change can encompass. Its multidisciplinary approach is appropriate for audiences from a range of disciplines and professions, from geologists, conservationists and land use planners to architects and developers. Urban Geomorphology not only transcends disciplines but also covers varied spatial, temporal frameworks and presents a diverse set of approaches and solutions to human impacts and geomorphological hazards within urban landscapes Features a cross disciplinary perspective highlighting the importance of the geosciences to environmental science engineering and public policy Focuses on the built environment as the location of concentrated human impacts and change Provides an international scope including case studies from urban areas around the world Anxious Joburg Nicky Falkof, Cobus van Staden, 2020-10-01 An interdisciplinary account of the life of Johannesburg South Africa s global south city Anxious Joburg focuses on Johannesburg the largest and wealthiest city in South Africa as a case study for the contemporary global South city Global South cities are often characterised as sites of contradiction and difference that produce a range of feelings around anxiety This is often imagined in terms of the global North s anxieties about the South migration crime terrorism disease and environmental crisis Anxious Joburg invites readers to consider an intimate perspective of living inside such a city How does it feel to live in the metropolis of Johannesburg what are the conditions intersections affects and experiences that mark the contemporary urban Scholars visual artists and storytellers all look at unexamined aspects of Johannesburg life From peripheral settlements to the inner city to the affluent northern suburbs from precarious migrants and domestic workers to upwardly mobile young women and fearful elites Anxious Joburg presents an absorbing engagement with this frustrating dangerous seductive city It offers a rigorous critical approach to Johannesburg revealing the way in which anxiety is a vital structuring principle of contemporary life The approach is strongly interdisciplinary with contributions from media studies anthropology religious studies urban geography migration studies and psychology It will appeal to students and teachers as well as to academic researchers concerned with Johannesburg South Africa cities and the global South The mix of approaches will also draw a non academic audience South African Statistics ,2002
