

Quoting Dialogue Example

The final exchange between Desiree and Armand illustrates, finally, Desiree's utter dependence on Armand:

He said nothing. "Shall I go, Armand?" she asked in tones sharp with agonized suspense.

"Yes, go."

"Do you want me to go?"

"Yes, I want you to go." (Chopin)

Tragically, this exchange and the dependence it illustrates lead directly to Desiree's death, both emotionally and physically.

Heisterkamp, 2004-06-08 Human conversational partners are able at least to a certain extent to detect the speaker's or listener's emotional state and may attempt to respond to it accordingly. When instead one of the interlocutors is a computer a number of questions arise such as the following: To what extent are dialogue systems able to simulate such behaviors? Can we learn the mechanisms of emotional behaviors from observing and analyzing the behavior of human speakers? How can emotions be automatically recognized from a user's mimics, gestures, and speech? What possibilities does a dialogue system have to express emotions itself? And very importantly: would emotional system behavior be desirable at all? Given the state of ongoing research into incorporating emotions in dialogue systems we found it timely to organize a Tutorial and Research Workshop on Active Dialogue Systems ADS2004 at Kloster Irsee in Germany during June 14-16, 2004. After two successful ISCA Tutorial and Research Workshops on Multimodal Dialogue Systems at the same location in 1999 and 2002 we felt that a workshop focusing on the role of affect in dialogue would be a valuable continuation of the workshop series. Due to its interdisciplinary nature the workshop attracted submissions from researchers with very different backgrounds and from many different research areas working on, for example, dialogue processing, speech recognition, speech synthesis, embodied conversational agents, computer graphics, animation, user modelling, tutoring systems, cognitive systems, and human-computer interaction.
