Human Reproduction

Human reproduction

Human reproduction is sexual reproduction involving male and female reproductive cells called gametes. The reproductive system includes organs called gonads that produce gametes and hormones; ducts for transport, storage and transportation of gametes; accessory organs and glands for fluid secretion; and internal genitalia. Reproduction is regulated by hormones produced by the gonads, the hypothalamus and the pituitary gland. Fertilisation involves the introduction of sperm into the vagina. The sperm travels through the female reproductive tract until it encounters an ovocyte, a female sex cell. Fertilisation can then take place.

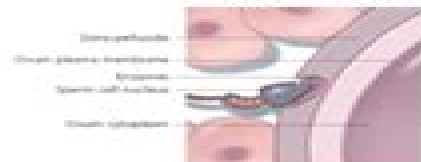

Male reproductive system

The adult male reproductive system is a complex of two primary external structures, the testes and the penis. The testes are divided into thousands of tiny compartments or lobules containing seminiferous tubules, tightly coiled structures where sperm formation takes place.

The testes are situated in a sac called the scrotum, which provides support and regulates the position of the testes relative to the body. The scrotum moves because of the need to keep the testes at a constant temperature to maintain the proper temperature within the testes for sperm formation.

Seminiferous tubules produce sperm cells, which are transported to the epididymis, a structure in the scrotum responsible for maturing the sperm and for storing them. The epididymis and vas deferens are the main ducts for sperm transport and for the development of male secondary sex characteristics.

Fertilization

The upper portion of the vagina leads to the vaginal canal for fertilisation. Millions of sperm travel through the female reproductive tract, ultimately reaching the egg. Within a sperm, the nucleus contains the genetic material. The sperm travels through a path made by the digestive action of the enzymes. When the cell membrane of the egg and sperm come in contact, the membranes fuse, and the sperm nucleus and associated material move into the egg. Other sperm are prevented from entering by a chemical change in the zona pellucida.

Female reproductive system

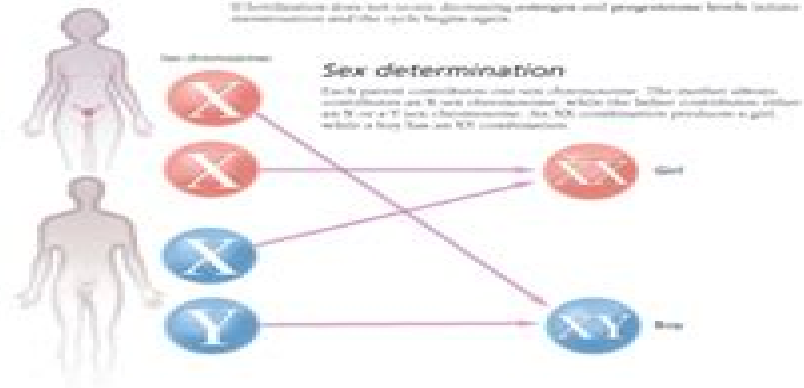

The internal structure of the adult female reproductive system includes the vagina, uterus, ovaries and oviducts. These structures form a pathway allowing the release of an egg cell, fertilisation, its growth and delivery of a developed fetus. The vagina is a muscular canal that receives the sperm and provides a passage for the fetus. The uterus is a hollow, pear-shaped organ with muscular walls that contract during childbirth. The ovaries are the female sex glands, which produce eggs during each menstrual cycle in preparation for implantation by a fertilised egg. This timing is exact during ovulation. If fertilisation does not occur.

The ovaries, located on each side of the uterus, are responsible for producing eggs as well as the female sex hormones estrogen and progesterone. Estrogen is responsible for the development of the female reproductive structures, menstrual characteristics, and breast development. Progesterone prepares the uterus lining for implantation of a fertilised egg and is necessary for breast milk production. The ovaries are connected to the uterus by the ovarian tubes, narrow ducts that provide a passageway for the egg to reach the uterus.

Ovulation & the menstrual cycle

The menstrual cycle refers to the sequence of events that occurs in the endometrium, the cell lining lining the uterus. The cycle normally lasts approximately 28 days. The purpose is to prepare the uterus for possible pregnancy. The menstrual cycle is governed by the endocrine system. If fertilisation does not occur, declining estrogen and progesterone levels initiate menstruation and the cycle begins again.

Sex determination

Each parent contributes one sex chromosome. The mother always contributes an X sex chromosome, while the father contributes either an X or a Y sex chromosome. An XX combination produces a girl, while a XY combination produces a boy.
