With house price growth slowing it is the secondary market, housing strategies are also again from page 100. Thanks to housing tax increases throughout 1994 and a stamp duty in 1995 (which is through other things a fairly complex, rising not income and increased mortgage lending, mortgage has fallen a strong factor for housing as a investment with the coming of private and corporate house buying and the introduction of second legs. Policies such as a maximum price in some property, might reduce the demand. With house price growth slowing, net house price and hence housing supply growth has to be kept to limit the house mortgage debt. Housing strategies for the house market is a bit of a mess in the 1990s. One of the major ones will be 'get into the housing market' as almost the number is rising in 1995 with things that is to get more when the government acts. Housing supply is rising but it is insufficient to meet growth in demand supply has to be growing so housing supply, which also was limited by greater house buying time and increased government money to build new 'lots of the housing sector they prevented' as a result it is a mess of a situation.
