2012 GCSE English results Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Education Committee, 2013-06-11 The 2012 GCSE English results prompted significant controversy which ultimately resulted in an application for judicial review This report sets out the background to these events and identifies lessons to be learned The problems with GCSE English can be traced back to the 2007 09 development phase of the qualification in particular the turbulence which resulted from the shift away from a mostly linear to a modular system combined with a high proportion of controlled assessment and generous marking tolerances Exam board experts raised concerns at the time but these were not acted upon by the regulator the then interim Ofqual Further difficulties arose because of pressures from the school accountability system The problems experienced with GCSE English in 2012 highlighted serious weaknesses in the moderation of speaking and listening with consequences for grade awarding The current status of Ofqual as an independent regulator accountable to Parliament is the right one However the Coalition Government is bringing in wholesale changes to GCSEs and A levels to a tight timetable and at the same time Ofqual must have systems in place The Committee is also concerned that there is a rush towards separate exam systems for England Wales and Northern Ireland without careful reflection on what might be lost or consensus that this is the right thing to do

Differentiation Thinking and Learning for the 21st Century Numerical Development - From cognitive functions to neural underpinnings Korbinian Moeller, Elise Klein, Klaus F Willmes - von Hinckeldey, Karin Kucian, 2015-02-24

Living at the beginning of the 21st century requires being numerate because numerical abilities are not only essential for life prospects of individuals but also for economic interests of post industrial knowledge societies. Thus numerical development is at the core of both individual as well as societal interests. There is the notion that we are already born with a very basic ability to deal with small numerosities. Yet this often called number sense seems to be very restricted, approximate and driven by perceptual constraints. During our numerical development in formal e.g. school but also informal contexts e.g. family street we acquire culturally developed abstract symbol systems to represent exact numerosities in particular number words and Arabic digits refining our numerical capabilities. In recent years numerical development has gained increasing research interest documented in a growing number of behavioural, neuro scientific, educational, cross cultural and neuropsychological studies addressing this issue. Additionally our understanding of how numerical competencies develop has also benefitted considerably from the advent of different neuro imaging techniques allowing for an evaluation of developmental changes in the human brain. In sum we are now starting to put together a more and more coherent picture of how numerical competencies develop and how this development is associated with neural changes as well. In the end this knowledge might also lead to a better understanding of the reasons for atypical numerical development which often has grievous consequences for those who suffer from developmental dyscalculia or mathematics learning disabilities. Therefore this Research Topic deals with all aspects of numerical development findings from behavioural performance to underlying neural substrates from cross sectional to longitudinal evaluations from healthy to clinical populations. To this end we included empirical contributions using different experimental methodologies but also theoretical contributions, review articles or opinion papers.
