

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number and then randomly selects a name from the names placed in bowls for each group. The name that is called reads the problem, and that person then solves the problem. A new problem is then placed in the bowl and another name is called. This entire sequence is repeated for fifteen to twenty problems.

After the problems are all completed, each is read aloud. The group that has the greatest number of correct answers for average scores is designated the winning group and wins a prize. The problem awarded to the team with the greatest number of correct answers is designated the winner.

The teacher takes fifteen to twenty minutes to read the problems aloud and the students answer for the teacher. The time needed for the students to solve each problem for themselves is probably around thirty to forty minutes, depending on the complexity of the problems. Students may be asked to show how they solved a problem and may be asked to explain their solution to the class.

After all the problems are solved, the teacher may ask the students to discuss the problems and to give each other feedback on their solutions. The teacher may also ask the students to give feedback on the problems.

The teacher may also ask the students to give feedback on the problems. The teacher may also ask the students to give feedback on the problems.

The teacher may also ask the students to give feedback on the problems.

The teacher may also ask the students to give feedback on the problems.
