Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 100 male students. The program included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The results showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the students' physical fitness, as measured by heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The program also had a significant positive effect on the students' self-reported health and well-being. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective way to improve the physical fitness of male students.
