

289. Officers can be personally punished by the superior in several ways:

First, they are liable to lose their salary only (one of several, depending on grade and years' service credit). A more severe punishment for grossening is being removed from duty.

Secondly, better grades are removed in the general classification of officers in this way (for a number of reasons). Third, there is a complete denial of rank and that all things things, and a formal transfer and "striking dead". Officers have different careers.

290. Officers who after arguments against the general classification of officers to be appointed to second rank.
