Chapter 14b Investigating Natural Selection

Charles Darwin published The Origin of Species in 1859. It was one of the first scientific books to argue for natural selection and natural variation. Darwin's theory was the first to explain how species change over time. The second chapter, natural selection, is the process in which the organisms that are best adapted to an environment survive and reproduce. It is the process by which the organisms that are best adapted to an environment survive and reproduce. It is the process by which the organisms that are best adapted to an environment survive and reproduce.
