Innovations and Challenges in Grammar Michael McCarthy, 2020-05-19 Innovations and Challenges in Grammar traces the history of common understandings of what grammar is and where it came from to demonstrate how rules are anything but fixed and immutable In doing so it deconstructs the notion of correctness to show how grammar changes over time thereby exposing the social and historical forces that mould and change usage The questions that this book grapples with are Can we separate grammar from the other features of the language system and get a handle on it as an independent entity Why should there be strikingly different notions and models of grammar Are they in compatible Which one or ones fit s best the needs of applied linguists if we assume that applied linguists address real world problems through the lens of language And which one s could make most sense to non specialists If grammar is not a fixed entity but a set of usage norms in constant flux how can we persuade other professionals and the general public that this is a positive observation rather than a threat to civilised behaviour This book draws upon both historical and modern grammars from across the globe to provide a multi layered picture of world grammar It will be useful to teachers and researchers of English as a first and second language though the inclusion of examples from and occasional references to other languages French Spanish Malay Swedish Russian Welsh Burmese Japanese is intended to broaden the appeal to teachers and researchers of other languages brings out the strengths of the modelling adopted here paving new avenues for future research In sum this volume unites a diverse array of the literature that currently sits largely divorced between the theoretical and experimental realms and when put together a better understanding of reflexive pronouns under the auspices of the Emergentist Reflexivity Approach is forged

Learning a non-native language in a naturalistic environment: Insights from behavioural and neuroimaging research Christos Pliatsikas,Vicky Chondrogianni,2015-09-02 It is largely accepted in the relevant literature that successful learning of one or more non native languages is affected by a number of factors that are independent of the target language s per se these factors include the age of acquisition AoA of the target language s the type and amount of formal instruction the learners have received as well as the amount of language use that the learners demonstrate Recent experimental evidence suggests that one crucial factor for efficient native like performance in the non native language is the amount of naturalistic exposure or immersion that the learners receive to that language This can be broadly defined as the degree to which language learners use their non native language outside the classroom and for their day to day activities and usually presupposes that the learners live in an environment where their non native language is exclusively or mostly used Existing literature has suggested that linguistic immersion can be beneficial for lexical and semantic acquisition in a non native language as well as for non native morphological and syntactic processing More recent evidence has also suggested that naturalistic learning of a non native language can also have an impact on the patterns of brain activity underlying language processing as well as on the structure of brain regions that are involved expressed as changes in the grey matter structure This Research Topic brings together studies on the effects of learning and speaking a non native language in a naturalistic environment These include more efficient or native like processing in behavioural tasks tapping on language lexicon morphology syntax as well as changes in the brain structure and function as revealed by neuroimaging studies
