

Map Skills

Demographers need to create good quality choropleths, showing value ranges. They change each year. For example, choropleths might show that the population density in the growing region can be between 100,000 and 200,000 people per square kilometer. This is a range of values. The range of values is the difference between the highest and lowest values.

Now this map allows to create the population density.
