

With the dawn of the Internet, the birth of Internet slang, and the growing use of SMS, many of us are starting to forget the fundamental aspects of English punctuation. Would you like to write a great paper for one of your classes or submit a polished, impeccably-written proposal to your boss? If so, proper punctuation usage is a must. Consider this article a crash course in English punctuation and See Step 1 below to get started!

Proper Capitalization

Always start a sentence with a capital letter. Unless you're an avant-garde poet, you will need to capitalize the first letter of every sentence without exception. Usually, the capitalized form of a letter is just a bigger version of that letter, though there are exceptions (such as "q" and "Q").

Here is an example of proper capitalization at the beginning of a sentence:

- She invited her friend over after school.

Use capital letters to start proper nouns and titles. In addition to starting sentences, capital letters should also be at the start of both proper nouns and titles. Proper nouns are the official names of specific people, places, and things. Titles, which are a type of proper noun, refer to the official names of works of art like books, movies, plays, and so on, and of institutions, geographical areas, and much more. Titles can also be honorifics (Her Majesty, Mr. President, etc.).

- Titles and proper nouns that are more than one word long should have every word capitalized, except for small words and articles like "the", "an", "and", etc. The first word of a title should be capitalized regardless of what it is.

- Here are a few examples of capital letters being used for proper nouns and titles:

Genghis Khan quickly became the most powerful man in Asia, if not the world.

In her opinion, Queen Roberta's favorite museum in the world is the Smithsonian, which she visited during her trip to Washington, D.C., last year.

Use capital letters for acronyms. An acronym is a word formed from the first letter of every word in a long proper noun or title. Acronyms are frequently used to shorten long proper nouns that would be awkward to reprint in their entirety every time they are mentioned. Sometimes the letters of an acronym are separated by periods, though this is not always the case.

Here is an example of acronyms made from capital letters:

- The CIA and the NSA are just two of the U.S.'s many intelligence agencies.

Punctuation Marks

Use a period (full stop) to end declarative sentences and statements. Every sentence contains at least one punctuation mark - the one at its end. The most common of these sentence-ending punctuation marks is the period ("."), also called "full stop". This single dot is used to mark the end of a sentence that is declarative. The majority of sentences are declarative - any sentence that states a fact, explains an idea, or describes an idea, for instance, is declarative.

Here is an example of a period (full stop) being used correctly at the end of a sentence:

- The accessibility of the computer has increased tremendously over the past several years.

Use a question mark to end questions. The question mark ("?"), used at the end of a sentence, denotes that the sentence was an interrogative sentence - basically, a question. Use this punctuation mark at the end of all your questions, queries, and inquiries.

Here is an example of a question mark being used correctly at the end of a sentence:

- What has humanity done about the growing concern of global warming?

Use an exclamation point to end exclamatory sentences. The exclamation point ("!"), also called an "exclamation mark" or "shout mark") suggests excitement or strong emphasis in the preceding sentence. The exclamation point is also used, appropriately, to end exclamations - short expressions of intense emotion that are often only one word long.

Here are two examples of an exclamation point being used correctly at the end of a sentence:

- I can't believe how difficult the exam was!
- Eek! You scared me!
