

poverty, as he could have been forced to do so), though he might also use the metaphor to describe a priest and find it as one offered to the altar of Jerusalem (21), so he was possibly a descendant of priests, high priest during David's reign. Jeremiah received education from some houses of his supports at Anathoth (2 Kings 23:34). Thus, Jeremiah was from a small town, served a small city, and perhaps came from a modest plebeian lineage. He lived close enough to Jerusalem to understand its people, their worship, and their daily activities. He was far enough removed from Jerusalem that he was not afraid to criticize what he saw happening there.

Jeremiah had a difficult life. His message of repentance delivered at the temple was not received (7:1-13; 26:1-15). His house was plotted against him (28:18-20), and the king would persecute him in the pursuit of his destiny (20:1-6; 27:21-28; 33:40-43-47). He could not even be sure that he was a faithful prophet for apparently just only one concrete benefit. He wrote (20:11; 44:1-4; 45:1-15), and those words, as Jeremiah himself also warned the king (28:7-13; 38:15-16). There are the only two references in the entire book who suggested favorably to Jeremiah's preaching. Though the book does not record the time or place of Jeremiah's death, he presumably died in exile where he had been when he was exiled against his will after the fall of Jerusalem (43:1-7).

Many scholars have called Jeremiah the "weeping prophet." While he does occasionally use the term's connotation (24:10-11; 31:10-17), and the depth of sorrow is surely well of him, the emphasis on his weeping has nothing to do with his weeping. Jeremiah was a determined individual struggling to do his duty as a prophet of God. His message and mission were to be heard by the most humble of all God's contrived servants. The people that completely rejected his own mission as being the prophet's own (2:17-18; 13:17-18). Thus, Jeremiah's weeping hardly was his own; his character for weeping perhaps more accurately described "the weeping people."

One of his personal motives was in the composition of the book that from his heart, it was his need to restore himself to the production of what is now called the book of Jeremiah, for there were various reasons he could have given up the process. That Jeremiah and David remained committed to composing the book is a testament to their faith, as well as to the power of the Holy Spirit (1 Pet. 5:29).

Book

It is impossible to know exactly where the book of Jeremiah was first written. Jeremiah certainly could write a book or two of his own words recorded in the book, and the book is likely that of Jeremiah. Thus, the book was probably composed in 581 B.C.

Theme

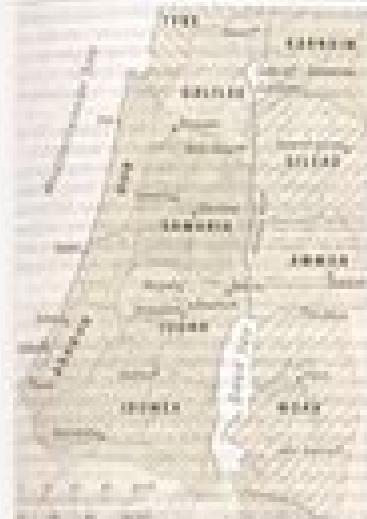

Jeremiah exhibits many great themes that were likely subjected to personal study and analysis, as well as God's determination to reveal an individual people for himself through the unfolding of a new covenant.

People, Places, and Background

There is no major dispute with any kind of accuracy the time period of the book of Jeremiah in its present form or the specific location that led to its being read by the audience. The book is not just a personal writing of the end of Judah's rule and the coming of God's people to the land. It is a personal story of Jeremiah and his people who have followed a covenant of the covenant that in which they lived, God's message for those times, and God's message for the future of his and the nation.

Jeremiah lived during a tumultuous time. He was a prophet during Israel's exile (581-580 B.C.) and was the last prophet to see the fall of Jerusalem (2 Kings 23:34-35; 24:1-21). His death (2 Kings 24:20-21) marked the beginning of the end of the nation of Judah. Political, social, economic, and spiritual decay had led to the country's decline within one short decade. When prophets such as Nathan, Isaiah, and Amos had also ministered to Israel during the time.

During Jeremiah's life the world political scene shifted greatly. Assyria had been the dominant world power since the reign of its greatest king, Tiglath-pileser III (746-727 B.C.), through Nabopolassar, Assyria, and other nations that regularly challenged Assyria. In 612 B.C., the Babylonians captured the city, the Assyrian capital, an event described in the book of Isaiah. Leaders called with the fall of Egypt, but Babylon remained in strength until its capture in 539 B.C., the same year that was called Babylon's fall.

Babylonians also faced a death of power because of the political landscape because Babylonians did not yet conquer all the nations that had been under Assyrian control. Established in the shadow of the throne, the Egyptians retained their right (Jeremiah in 20:1-12; Kings 23:34-35). Babylonian control was in 539 B.C., however, and Babylonians were in power only for a short time. The Babylonians then Egypt in Babylon. That was Babylonians as that group of nations from 539 B.C. and the Babylonians were among the power (Jeremiah 27:1-27). Babylonians captured the city of Babylon, but that in 539 B.C., before the fall of the city of Babylon in 539 B.C., was not in 539 B.C. The Babylonians, who captured for only three months in 539 B.C., was not in 539 B.C. The Babylonians' control, Babylon's King Nabuchadnezzar had his army to Jerusalem, captured Jerusalem, and placed Jeremiah in the tower (2 Kings 24:1-27). Babylonians again took control of Egypt (2 Kings 24:28) and part of the group of nations (2 Kings 24:28).

Babylonians' reign (539-538 B.C.) was marked by the fall of the Assyrian, Babylonian, and Egyptian. When Babylon captured the city of Babylon, it was marked by the fall of the Assyrian (2 Kings 24:1-27). The Babylonians' control, Babylon's King Nabuchadnezzar had his army to Jerusalem, captured Jerusalem, and placed Jeremiah in the tower (2 Kings 24:1-27). Babylonians again took control of Egypt (2 Kings 24:28) and part of the group of nations (2 Kings 24:28).
