Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group (n = 10) and a training group (n = 10). The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic exercise, while the control group remained sedentary. HR and EE were measured at rest and during submaximal exercise before and after the 12-week period. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and an increase in EE compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve cardiovascular fitness and increase energy expenditure in sedentary, middle-aged men.
