Regulatory Science Jason Scott Johnston, 2012-04-12 Institutions and Incentives in Regulatory Science explores fundamental problems with regulatory science in the environmental and natural resource law field Each chapter covers a variety of natural resource and regulatory areas ranging from climate change to endangered species protection and traditional health based environmental regulation Regulatory laws and institutions themselves strongly influence the direction of scientific research by creating a system of rewards and penalties for science As a consequence regulatory laws or institutions that are designed naively end up incentivizing scientists to generate and then publish only those results that further the substantive regulatory goals preferred by the scientists By relying so heavily on science to dictate policy regulatory laws and institutions encourage scientists to use their assessment of the state of the science to further their own preferred scientific and regulatory policy agendas Additionally many environmental and natural resource regulatory agencies have been instructed by legislatures to rely heavily upon science in their rulemaking In areas of rapidly evolving science regulatory agencies are inevitably looking for scientific consensus prematurely before the scientific process has worked through competing hypotheses and evidence The contributors in this volume address how institutions for regulatory science should be designed in light of the inevitable misfit between the political or legal demand for regulatory action and the actual state of evolving scientific knowledge The Oxford Handbook of Philosophy of Science Paul Humphreys, 2016-08-04 This handbook provides both an overview of state of the art scholarship in philosophy of science as well as a guide to new directions in the discipline Section I contains broad overviews of the main lines of research and the state of established knowledge in six principal areas of the discipline including computational physical biological psychological and social sciences as well as general philosophy of science Section II covers what are considered to be the traditional topics in the philosophy of science such as causation probability models ethics and values and explanation Section III identifies new areas of investigation that show promise of becoming important areas of research including the philosophy of astronomy and astrophysics data complexity theory neuroscience simulations post Kuhnian philosophy post empiricist epistemology and emergence Most chapters are accessible to scientifically educated non philosophers as well as to professional philosophers and the contributors all leading researchers in their field bring diverse perspectives from the North American European and

ImageCLEF Henning Müller, Paul Clough, Thomas Deselaers, Barbara Caputo, 2010-08-20 The pervasive creation and consumption of content especially visual content is ingrained into our modern world We're constantly consuming visual media content in printed form and in digital form in work and in leisure pursuits Like our cave man forefathers we use pictures to record things which are of importance to us as memory cues for the future but nowadays we also use pictures and images to document processes we use them in engineering in art in science in medicine in entertainment and we also use images in advertising Moreover when images are in digital format either scanned from an analogue format or more often than not born digital we can use the power of our computing and networking to exploit images to great effect Most of the technical problems associated with creating compressing storing transmitting rendering and protecting image data are already solved We use accepted standards and have tremendous infrastructure and the only outstanding challenges apart from managing the scale issues associated with growth are to do with locating images That involves analysing them to determine their content classifying them into related groupings and searching for images To overcome these challenges we currently rely on image metadata the description of the images then captured automatically at creation time or manually added afterwards

Science under siege Peter Banks, Daniel Lunney, Chris Dickman, 2012-11-01 On Saturday 29 November 2008 the Royal Zoological Society of NSW held a forum with the theme of Science under siege As the RZS is a zoological society zoology under threat became the secondary theme and the basis for selecting speakers This book records that forum with the papers developed for this book as the written word from the spoken presentations Papers that were presented as posters are included as are the edited plenary sessions which featured questions from the floor with answers and comments encouraged from anyone in the forum We were delighted that Mark Horstman from ABC Catalyst was willing to replace his peripatetic colleague Paul Willis who was nonetheless very happy to write the foreword There is a place for such skilled science communicators we need more of them and scientists at the lab bench or in the field or exploring computer models or those that have now taken a job in the policy world need to stay in touch with them Some might say that the title Science under siege seems a bit extreme but we invite you to examine the evidence as presented in this book What follows is an edited version of the introductory material that advertised the forum The title looks dramatic but if you ask yourself is anything killing the science in your area of interest you might be surprised that you come up with a point or two Then ask a wider set of questions such as are there any pressures that preclude people from doing good zoology do either political budgetary constraints impact on your field is science in the media a subject that influences the outcome of your work are there economic impediments to careers in zoology is the education mix in Australia right for this new century are the best researchers becoming full time administrators or the converse the poor researchers becoming the administrators can you place the Australian situation in an international context are there reduced opportunities for human interactions with the natural world is the virtual world killing reality and what are your predictions of the future To deal with such issues the Royal Zoological Society of NSW has structured the day to emphasize a range of themes beginning with identifying the issues including those that are persistent and those that are emerging and encompassing palpable hits to science Direct and indirect hits to science include such matters as the withdrawal of funding subversion of science death by 1000 cuts redirection of funding to fashion issues and using the name of science to justify things that are really not justifiable The name of science is being dragged down We need to confront the ever present problem of ignoring the scientifically accurate for the politically correct This raises such questions as to whether basic skills in biology are not being acquired because of public concern based on extreme animal rights propaganda Good science is not optional but what can be done if you are under siege The answers include understanding the philosophy of science the legal perspective and asking what scientists are or should be doing Audience participation will be a central part of this forum The plenary sessions will address questions raised by the speakers and the posters and debate issues and consider options for future directions It is widely known that it is hard to pull a major paper together on this theme but so many scientists know of at least one matter that they would like to draw to public attention So short contributions are included Listen to the speakers present some overarching themes or compelling case studies contribute to the debate on the day then examine your stance on a variety of these subjects to see whether the day changes your view of this often cryptic aspect of zoology As editors we wish to acknowledge the skills of the referees all papers were refereed by two peers and the patience of the authors for what has been a long gap between the date of the forum and this publication By the end of 2008 the Royal Zoological Society of NSW along with everyone else was caught by the GFC Global Financial Crisis and we simply had to extend the length of the queue for publication We also reassessed our mode of publication The Council of the Society voted to publish this production as an ebook as well as a short print run for formal library deposit and other essential matters The ebook is open access to enhance the reach of the papers and the ideas At the same time the Royal Zoological Society of NSW signed a contract for a more international mode of access of the publications of the Society and papers are now available via Metapress <http://rzsnsw.metapress.com> Science remains under siege in our view and now we have been alerted to the range of issues it becomes easier to spot the small irritating closing of options that collectively amount to a denial of science and its relegation to an optional way of looking at the world During production of this book this matter became obvious on a number of fronts which led us to invite the paper by Rosie Cooney and colleagues to defend their science of kangaroo conservation and commercial harvesting from an attack on the science We also saw that this issue of science under siege needs more airing and the Royal Zoological Society of NSW is planning its forum for the end of 2012 to take up another strand of this theme by capitalizing on the lifelong insights of scientists under the rubric of grumpy scientists an ecological conscience of a nation This idea in fact derives directly from the suggestions in the plenary sessions by Nick Holmes and Charley Krebs We are also concerned for young scientists with science under siege manifesting often in a failure to create permanent careers for science graduates that advance science itself and zoology in particular from flourishing and identifying problems and finding solutions If we want to conserve the native fauna of Australia then Australian zoologists will have to be key team members We contend that to put science under siege and zoology under threat we not only further imperil our native wildlife but also the careers of the small band of specialists that can see the issues find the problems implement solutions and evaluate the outcomes In short science under siege is not a light matter and no one in this forum thought so Read on form an opinion and speak up and publish your thoughts your examples and your solutions

Earth System Science: Bridging the Gaps between Disciplines Gerrit Lohmann,Klaus Grosfeld,Dieter Wolf-Gladrow,Vikram Unnithan,Justus Notholt,Anna Wegner,2012-11-06 Earth system science is traditionally split into various disciplines Geology Physics Meteorology Oceanography Biology etc and several sub disciplines Overall the diversity of expertise provides a solid base for interdisciplinary research However gaining holistic insights into the Earth system requires the integration of observations paleoclimate data analysis tools and modeling

These different approaches of Earth system science are rooted in various disciplines that cut across a broad range of timescales. It is therefore necessary to link these disciplines at a relatively early stage in PhD programs. The linking of data and modeling as it is the special emphasis in our graduate school enables graduate students from a variety of disciplines to cooperate and exchange views on the common theme of Earth system science which leads to a better understanding of processes within a global context.

International Handbook of Research in History, Philosophy and Science Teaching Michael R. Matthews, 2014-07-03 This inaugural handbook documents the distinctive research field that utilizes history and philosophy in investigation of theoretical, curricular and pedagogical issues in the teaching of science and mathematics. It is contributed to by 130 researchers from 30 countries; it provides a logically structured, fully referenced guide to the ways in which science and mathematics education is informed by the history and philosophy of these disciplines as well as by the philosophy of education more generally. The first handbook to cover the field, it lays down a much needed marker of progress to date and provides a platform for informed and coherent future analysis and research of the subject. The publication comes at a time of heightened worldwide concern over the standard of science and mathematics education, attended by fierce debate over how best to reform curricula and enliven student engagement in the subjects. There is a growing recognition among educators and policy makers that the learning of science must dovetail with learning about science; this handbook is uniquely positioned as a locus for the discussion. The handbook features sections on pedagogical, theoretical, national and biographical research, setting the literature of each tradition in its historical context. It reminds readers at a crucial juncture that there has been a long and rich tradition of historical and philosophical engagements with science and mathematics teaching, and that lessons can be learnt from these engagements for the resolution of current theoretical, curricular and pedagogical questions that face
