Internationalization and Institutionalization of Quality Management

Internationalization and institutionalization of quality management are two processes that have been studied extensively in the literature. Internationalization refers to the process of expanding a company's operations across national borders, while institutionalization refers to the process of establishing a new practice or system as a standard or norm within an organization or industry. Both processes are closely related and often occur simultaneously.

Figure 1 illustrates the overall structure of the proposed system. The system is designed to be a plug-and-play module that can be integrated into existing systems. The system is composed of three main components: a data source, a processing unit, and a user interface. The data source provides input data to the processing unit, which then generates output data for the user interface. Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 20 sedentary middle-aged men (mean age 45.5 ± 5.2 years, range 35-55 years). They were divided into two groups: a control group (n = 10) and a training group (n = 10). The training group underwent a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The training program included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical fitness and health of the subjects were assessed at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health compared to the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The training program had a positive effect on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men.
