

Personal Values Reflection

After completing the values sheet I learned a few things about myself. My top three values were, from first to third, Job security, and money and safety which both tied with seven check marks each. The thing I gathered from this is that I am willing to go wherever the paycheck takes me, I want to live comfortably and have a job that I truly want to do whatever that may be. These values give me quite a bit of variety in what my options are which can be good or bad depending on how some might look at it.

The events and experiences that have shaped me and my values come from a variety of factors. While I can't exactly put a quantity on how much each individual variable has affected my life, I can list a few that I know have provided some influence in the kind of person I am today. I think that, like most people, parents are a huge factor in what your values are regardless of whether you want to follow in their footsteps. I think that my friends have also influenced the way I am. Just the fact of having friends and what stories and experiences that we had contributed to the values that I have today. Another factor was my football coach, and the sport of football itself. The person I was when I joined my High-School team and when I left were vastly different and the main factor was football. I learned to be a team player, to be there for others and do your part not because you want to, but because it must get done.

I hope that these results will help me in my search for my passion. I still have no idea what that is but I am hopeful that with some more research and the help of this reflection on my values, I will be able to discover what it is I should do with my life. One of the career paths I have been considering, Journalism, is one that really depends on where you are in terms of fulfilling my most important criteria. In bigger cities, and in bigger companies, the pay is much more compared to smaller more rural areas. I would prefer to live in a small-town setting; however, it is something I am willing to sacrifice if that is what it takes to live comfortably.

This value's sheet was a step forward towards making my decision. If I simply had been asked what my values are, I am not sure I could accurately put them into words and this sheet has helped me do that. Hopefully this will guide me in the right direction towards something that I will be excited and passionate about.

An Essay on Science and Narcissism Bruno Lemaitre, 2020-05-11

Scientists are often seen as meticulous and impartial individuals solely devoted to their study and the search for scientific truth. But a deeper analysis reveals that many of them are highly egocentric and sensitive to their public image and its associated privileges. Egocentrism, elitism, strategic media occupation, and self-enhancement strategies are some of the first particularities that strike a newcomer to the academic world. An Essay on Science and Narcissism analyses the influence of narcissism, an important human personality dimension, on science. The central idea is that narcissism is an advantageous trait for succeeding in an academic environment. Scientists with a high ego are better at convincing others of the importance of their research, and as excellent networkers, they are well placed to exploit the different facets of the research system. In his essay, Bruno Lemaitre also discusses the psychological and sociobiological origins of narcissism and investigates the possible connection between narcissism, on one hand, and dominance and short-term mating strategy, on the other. The recent increase in narcissism in Western society and how this destabilises not only our society but also scientific practice is also discussed. This essay offers an alternative view of science by analysing the narcissistic personality prevalent among leading scientists but rarely placed in the spotlight.

Re-imagining Curriculum Lynn Quinn, 2019-11-15. The book argues that academics, academic developers, and academic leaders need to undertake curriculum work in their institutions that has the potential to disrupt common-sense notions about curriculum and create spaces for engagement with scholarly concepts and theories to re-imagine curricula for the changing times. Now more than ever in the history of higher education, curriculum practices and processes need to be shared; the findings of research undertaken on curriculum need to be disseminated to inform curriculum work. We hope the book will enable readers to look beyond their contextual difficulties and constraints to find spaces where they can dream and begin to implement innovative and creative solutions to what may seem like intractable challenges or difficulties.

Personal Identity Ellen Frankel Paul, Fred Dycus Miller, Jeffrey Paul, 2005. What is a person? What makes me the same person today that I was yesterday or will be tomorrow? Philosophers have long pondered these questions. In Plato's Symposium, Socrates observed that all of us are constantly undergoing change; we experience physical changes to our bodies as well as changes in our manners, customs, opinions, desires, pleasures, pains, and fears. Aristotle theorized that there must be some underlying substratum that remains the same even as we undergo these changes. John Locke rejected Aristotle's view and reformulated the problem of personal identity in his own way: is a person a physical organism that persists through time, or is a person identified by the persistence of psychological states by memory? These essays, written by prominent philosophers and legal and economic theorists, offer valuable insights into the nature of personal identity and its implications for morality and public policy.

Formalism in Ethics and Non-formal Ethics of Values Max Scheler, 1973. A lengthy critique of Kant's apriorism precedes discussions on the ethical principles of eudaemonism, utilitarianism, pragmatism, and positivism.
