Gray White, 2009-11-30 The field of black women's history gained recognition as a legitimate field of study only late in the twentieth century Collecting stories that are both deeply personal and powerfully political Telling Histories compiles seventeen personal narratives by leading black women historians at various stages in their careers Their essays illuminate how first as graduate students and then as professional historians they entered and navigated the realm of higher education a world concerned with and dominated by whites and men In distinct voices and from different vantage points the personal histories revealed here also tell the story of the struggle to establish a new scholarly field Black women alleged by affirmative action supporters and opponents to be twofers recount how they have confronted racism sexism and homophobia on college campuses They explore how the personal and the political intersect in historical research and writing and in the academy Organized by the years the contributors earned their Ph.D.s these essays follow the black women who entered the field of history during and after the civil rights and black power movements endured the turbulent 1970s and opened up the field of black women's history in the 1980s By comparing the experiences of older and younger generations this collection makes visible the benefits and drawbacks of the institutionalization of African American and African American women's history Telling Histories captures the voices of these pioneers intimately and publicly Contributors Elsa Barkley Brown University of Maryland Mia Bay Rutgers University Leslie Brown Washington University in St. Louis Crystal N. Silent Stillness—Buried Alive Diane Metivier-Hart, 2017-02-08 On Monday January 10 2005 it took just eight seconds for fifty six year old nurse Diane Hart to be buried alive while in her home during the La Conchita landslide Buried thirty feet under the mountain and covered by rocks mud and the tangled debris of her displaced home she struggles to survive with only a two by two foot airspace with collapsed lungs and multiple broken bones While entombed she reflects on her lifewhat led her to this place in time and whether she has made a positive impact on others After an out of body experience she finds contentment and peace whether she lives or dies Motivated by the desire to see her grandchildren grow up and to see her family again she finds the strength to stay alive while rescuers desperately search for her After facing death and passing through judgment from God she could not leave her family now a family in crisis Eight seconds is all it took for the entire mountain to come down and destroy twenty seven homes kill ten people and injure eight more A Silent Stillness tells the inspiring story of her faith hope and survival after losing everything she owns including her health and being trapped deep beneath the rubble for four and a half hours
