DXS-31 FEATURES & ACCESSORIES

PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

The DXS-31 is a battery powered stationary transmitter designed for use with Linear's DXS and DX format receivers. This transmitter can be used in a variety of wireless remote-control applications. Triggering the transmitter with its built-in magnetic switch, an external switch or an external glass break detector sends a digitally coded wireless signal to its companion receiver.

The digital DXS code format features over a million possible codes. The DXS transmitters are pre-coded at the factory to unique codes, so no field coding is required. The DXS-31 can send four different codes: alarm, restore, low battery and status.

For versatility, any transmitter can be programmed into any receiver channel. Receivers must be programmed to the transmitter's code before system testing and operation. Refer to the receiver's instructions for details on programming.

In a typical installation, the magnet is mounted on a door or window and the transmitter is mounted on the frame. When the magnet moves more than 1/2" away from the transmitter, an alarm signal is sent. When the magnet returns near to the unit, a restore signal is sent. Alarms and restores can also be sent from external contacts wired to the terminal block. Pressing the case sends a test transmission that updates the receiver to the current state of the contacts and lights the test indicator. When the transmitter's case is open, the transmit indicator will light each time the unit sends an alarm or restore signal. The indicator is disabled when the case is closed (except for test transmissions). The indicator will flash during operation and test when the batteries are low.

The transmitter is powered from two 3-Volt EC0032 lithium batteries with an expected battery life of up to 3 years.

Every hour, the DXS-31 will send a status transmission to the receiver. The hourly signal updates the receiver to the transmitter's condition. By monitoring status transmissions, the receiver can determine if a transmitter has a low battery or has been removed from the system. DXS format receivers can monitor status signals, DX format receivers cannot.

A three-position terminal block is for connection to normally closed external contacts or a normally open "Window Bug" type glass break sensor. An internal jumper selects which input to use. Selections are: internal switch only, external switch only, both external and internal switch, and glass break sensor.

Another internal jumper selects an instant or delayed transmission code. This jumper doesn't delay the actual transmissions, but changes the code of the signal sent so the receiver can process the signal as coming from an instant/delay transmitter.

A snap-on transmitter mounting plate is provided for easy installation. The magnet is adjustable with four height positions. A 1/4" high-magnet spacer is also supplied to snap-on to the base of the magnet.

OPENING CASE

REMOVE THE CASE TOP BY TWISTING A SMALL FLAT BLADE SCREWDRIVER IN THE TOP CASE SLOT (ON THE FLAT END OF THE TRANSMITTER).
