

Lack of transparent reporting of trial monitoring approaches in randomised controlled trials: A systematic review of contemporary protocol papers

Shao-Fan Hsieh^{1,2} , Victoria Yorke-Edwards¹ , Macey L Murray^{1,3,4} , Carlos Diaz-Montana¹ , Sharon B Love^{1*}  and Matthew R Sydes^{1,5*}

Abstract

Background: Monitoring is essential to ensure patient safety and data integrity in clinical trials as per Good Clinical Practice. The Standard Protocol Items: Recommendations for Interventional Trials Statement and its checklist guides authors to include monitoring in their protocols. We investigated how well monitoring was reported in published 'protocol papers' for contemporary randomised controlled trials.

Methods: A systematic search was conducted in PubMed to identify eligible protocol papers published in selected journals between 1 January 2020 and 31 May 2020. Protocol papers were classified by whether they reported monitoring and, if so, by the details of monitoring. Data were summarised descriptively.

Results: Of 811 protocol papers for randomised controlled trials, 386 (48%; 95% CI: 44%–51%) explicitly reported some monitoring information. Of these, 20% (77/386) reported monitoring information consistent with an on-site monitoring approach, and 39% (152/386) with central monitoring, 26% (101/386) with a mixed approach, while 14% (54/386) did not provide sufficient information to specify an approach. Only 8% (30/386) of randomised controlled trials reported complete details about all of scope, frequency and organisation of monitoring; frequency of monitoring was the least reported. However, 6% (25/386) of papers used the term 'audit' to describe 'monitoring'.

Discussion: Monitoring information was reported in only approximately half of the protocol papers. Suboptimal reporting of monitoring hinders the clinical community from having the full information on which to judge the validity of a trial and jeopardises the value of protocol papers and the credibility of the trial itself. Greater efforts are needed to promote the transparent reporting of monitoring to journal editors and authors.

Background

Clinical trial monitoring¹ plays a vital role in ensuring participants' well-being is protected, trial data are accurate and complete, and the conduct of the trial complies with the protocol, regulatory requirements and Good Clinical Practice (GCP) guidelines.² Monitoring³ here refers to the methods used by a sponsor to oversee the conduct of, and reporting of data from, clinical trials, including the 'review of site processes, procedures and records, and verification of the accuracy of data submitted to the sponsor'.³ In the past, clinical trials predominantly relied on on-site monitoring, in which trial monitors systematically and repeatedly visited sites

The effectiveness revolution both in research and clinical practice has tested available methods for health services research to the extreme. How far can observational methods, routine data and qualitative methods be used in health care evaluation? What cost and outcome measures are appropriate and how should data be gathered? With the support of over two million pounds from the British Health Technology Assessment Research Programme the research project for this Handbook has led to both a synthesis of all of the existing knowledge in these areas and an agenda for future debate and research. The chapters and their authors have been selected through a careful process of peer review and provide a coherent and complete approach to the field. The handbook has been a unique collaboration between internationally regarded clinicians, statisticians, epidemiologists, social scientists, health economists and ethicists. It provides the most advanced thinking and the most authoritative resource for a state of the art review of methods of evaluating health care and will be required reading for anyone involved in health services research and management.

Hägg,2012-12-06 In the Preface to Early Papers on Diffraction of X rays by Crystals Volume I containing Chapters I V and published in 1969 the history and planning of the complete book were outlined The publication in two separate and consecutive volumes was merely a matter of management the compilation of both volumes was done at the same time There is a distinct difference in subject matter between both volumes Volume I contains the fundamentals of the theory while Volume II treats the practical development of the trial method and the genesis and first applications of the Fourier method In the period covered by Early Papers 1912 1935 the trial method leads to the successful conquest of structures with up to a hundred parameters We conclude the book with Patterson s discovery 1934 of the p2 series as described in his second more detailed and extended paper of 1935 With this method the apparatus was completed which led to the present undreamt of successes of the Fourier method in the field of organic chemistry We have considered the inclusion of Robertson s famous synthesis of the structure of phtalocyanine 1936 However we decided that its proper place would be at the beginning of a book which no doubt will appear one day describing this later period Considerations of space caused us to give up the chapter on Texture planned at first
