Effects of the Civil War

Reconstruction and the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments

The American Civil War was a war in the United States that was fought between states supporting the federal union and southern states that voted to leave and form the Confederate States of America. There were several effects of the Civil War such as: the creation of a single unified country, the abolition of slavery, equal power to both federal and state governments, and a stronger sense of nationalism.

Before the Civil War, over four million people in the United States were enslaved. The majority of the enslaved people worked in agriculture in the southern states. Enslaved people had few rights, and were often forced to live in harsh conditions. Slavery was the main cause of the Civil War. After the Civil War, three changes were made to the United States Constitution. These changes are called amendments. An amendment is a change or addition to the Constitution. The purpose of these amendments was to reinforce that slavery was officially illegal. The three amendments were the 13th, 14th, and 15th. These were the first amendments made to the Constitution in sixty years. The amendments each described changes of how the United States would treat people.

The 13th Amendment stated that slavery would not be tolerated in the United States. The amendment officially banned slavery and involuntary servitude. This made slavery illegal in the United States.

The 14th Amendment defined and outlined the rights of citizenship. The amendment stated that anyone born or naturalized in the United States is a citizen of both the United States and the state they live in. It stated that States could not take away or limit the rights of a citizen in that state. It also gave citizens the right to due process, life, liberty, and property.

The 15th Amendment defined new voting rights for citizens. The amendment gave all men the right to vote. The United States government could not deny men the right to vote based on color, race, or previous enslavement. This amendment gave African American men the right to vote.

These amendments were added to the Constitution to protect equality by banning slavery, defining citizenship, and protecting voting rights. The amendments are often referred to as the Civil War Amendments. They were all passed in the 1860s. The purpose of these amendments was to guarantee equality for freed slaves. These amendments helped set the stage for future Civil Rights Movements.
