Clark, Simon Hakim, Avi Ostfeld, 2011-09-01 Following the events of 9/11 the Administrator of the US Environmental Protection Agency created the Water Protection Task Force WPTF which identified water and wastewater systems as a major area of vulnerability to deliberate attack The WPTF suggested that there are steps that can be taken to reduce these vulnerabilities and to make it as difficult as possible for potential saboteurs to succeed The WPTF recommended that be scrutinized with renewed vigor to secure water and wastewater systems against these possible threats It also recommended that water and wastewater systems have a response plan in place in the event an act of terrorism occurs The WPTF identified water distribution networks as an area of special vulnerability and highlighted the need for rapid on line detection methods that are accurate and have a wide detection range As a result of these recommendations novel technologies from various fields of science and engineering are now addressing water security issues and water and wastewater utilities are looking for innovative solutions. Once such technologies are available, there will be a rapid implementation process that will present many business opportunities for the private sector. However, in addition to terrorist threats, water and wastewater systems are inherently vulnerable to natural disasters such as earthquakes and floods. This volume will address the problems associated with both intended terrorist attacks and natural disasters affecting water or wastewater systems. The book is divided into parts based on the kinds of threats facing water and wastewater systems: 1 a direct attack on water and wastewater infrastructure storage reservoirs and distribution and collection networks; 2 a cyber attack disabling the functionality of the water and wastewater systems or taking over control of key components which might result in system failures; and 3 a deliberate chemical or biological contaminant injection at one of the water distribution system's nodes. It will examine unique plans, technological and managerial innovations for protecting such systems and includes descriptions of projects that were implemented to respond to natural disasters. Case studies are presented that discuss existing projects and evaluate their performance with an emphasis on providing guidelines and techniques that can be implemented by water and wastewater planners and managers to deal with natural and manmade disasters should they occur. Allan, M.F. Guest, A.D. Simpson, D.S. Henty, D. Nicole, 2012-12-06 Over the past decade, high performance computing has demonstrated the ability to model and predict accurately a wide range of physical properties and phenomena. Many of these have had an important impact in contributing to wealth creation and improving the quality of life through the development of new products and processes with greater efficacy, efficiency, or reduced harmful side effects, and in contributing to our ability to understand and describe the world around us. Following a survey of the U.K.'s urgent need for a supercomputing facility for academic research, see next chapter, a 256 processor T3D system from Cray Research Inc. went into operation at the University of Edinburgh in the summer of 1994. The High Performance Computing Initiative (HPCI) was established in November 1994 to support and ensure the efficient and effective exploitation of the T3D and future generations of HPC systems by a number of consortia working in the frontier areas of computational research. The Cray T3D, now comprising 512 processors and total of 32 GB memory, represented a very significant increase in computing power, allowing simulations to move forward on a number of fronts. The three-fold aims of the HPCI may be summarised as follows: 1 to seek and maintain a world class position in computational science and engineering; 2 to support and promote exploitation of HPC in industry; commerce and business and 3 to support education and training in HPC and its application
